

SLINGSHOT

Number 1, Issue #50

Berkeley, California

Fall, 1993

One Neat City

INSIDE!

Life in the Matrix	p.1
Homes Not Jail	p.3
Armed and Dangerous ...	p.4
Clinton Health Care as Power Grab.....	p.4
The New Health Order.....	p.5
Organic Underground Radicals.....	p.5
Voyeurs and Exhibitionists	p.6
LOCAL Projects Actions Events.....	p.8
What's happening at the Long Haul?	p.9
EF! IDAHO UPDATE	p.11
We are All Responsible - an LA community response to police abuse	p.11
The A.L.F. strikes again! ..	p.12

SLINGSHOT

Volume 1, Issue #50

Fall 1993

Berkeley, California

BERKELEY POLICE DEPARTMENT Supplemental Report

HISTORY: Two local activists groups calling themselves "CRITICAL MASS," and the "AUTO-FREE BAY AREA COALITION," have been extremely active in the city of Berkeley over the past year. Although hiding themselves behind such worthwhile causes such as air pollution and excessive automobile traffic, these groups are nothing more than self-proclaimed anarchists and local activists who have adopted innovative tactics to create civil disorder and attempt to carry out the "anarchist revolution."

CRACKDOWN!

'Food Not Bombs' Criminalized

134 Food Not Bombs Volunteers were arrested while feeding the hungry during the month of September in San Francisco. The first arrests were violent and 27 people were charged with felony conspiracy. People have been getting arrested almost every day with the exception of weekends. (The Mayor doesn't seem to be around then so the cops leave us alone.) Members of Food Not Bombs groups from Santa Cruz, East Bay, Sacramento and Marin were arrested during Jordan's latest clamp down. Food Not Bombs has had several vans confiscated and our pots, tables signs and literature have been taken by the police as "evidence." Volunteers can not drive their vehicles near City Hall for fear they will lose them. In spite of this, the community spirit is high even in the face of Fascism. There is wide popular support for Food Not Bombs continued resistance.

The arrests of Food Not Bombs are part of a larger police clamp down called "the Quality

Fight Back!

Come to lunch and dinner. A sustained resistance could be the most important thing.

Organize against Matrix. Call the Coalition on Homelessness (415) 346-3740 and get

Life in the Matrix

Starting in August of this year, Mayor Frank Jordan of San Francisco implemented the Matrix Program, a massive mobilization of the police department against homeless people. Police have targeted homeless people for nuisance crimes, such as sleeping in public, public intoxication, blocking the sidewalk, urinating in public and aggressive panhandling. Not only are almost all of these activities legal in private, where homeless people often cannot go, but also are enforced almost exclusively on homeless people.

Besides hundreds of arrests and citations, a lot of homeless people's property has been confiscated. The Matrix program was at first applied only in the downtown area, but is being expanded to operate throughout the city.

Many laws are enforced illegally:
647 (i): no lodging on public or private property. Does not cover sleeping in parks in the daytime, as it is often enforced. It is actually defined as establishing some

Criminalized

134 Food Not Bombs Volunteers were arrested while feeding the hungry during the month of September in San Francisco. The first arrests were violent and 27 people were charged with felony conspiracy. People have been getting arrested almost every day with the exception of weekends. (The Mayor doesn't seem to be around then so the cops leave us alone.) Members of Food Not Bombs groups from Santa Cruz, East Bay, Sacramento and Marin were arrested during Jordan's latest clamp down. Food Not Bombs has had several vans confiscated and our pots, tables signs and literature have been taken by the police as "evidence." Volunteers can not drive their vehicles near City Hall for fear they will lose them. In spite of this, the community spirit is high even in the face of Fascism. There is wide popular support for Food Not Bombs continued resistance.

The arrests of Food Not Bombs are part of a larger police clamp down called "the Quality of Life" Matrix program wherein the police are under orders to wake-up, ticket and arrest homeless people—driving them from the city. The program has caused great pain to the homeless but since there is no place to go, the number of people living on the streets only grows.

This summer activists in San Francisco have had relatively good success at resisting and exposing the inherently exploitative nature of the unrestrained corporate greed. Homes Not Jails, The Coalition On Homelessness, San Francisco Tenants Union, Empty The Shelters, Gray Panthers and many other groups have organized building take-overs, speak outs at public hearings and a blockade of the Trans Bay bus terminal when the city evicted 300 homeless into the police Matrix clamp down. The Mayor was host to The National Mayors Conference on Homelessness and Hunger but a counter Conference and Boycott called by homeless rights groups was effective. Only 5 of the original 35 invited mayors attended and the Clinton Administration's head of the Inter-Agency Task force was challenged to "show action or get out of the way."

Food Not Bombs held several large protests including one on September 29th where 53 people were arrested. The protests have included theater, signs, music, and arrests of food servers. Activists protested outside the

Fight Back!

Come to lunch and dinner. A sustained resistance could be the most important thing. People are needed to attend every meal to offer support or risk arrest. Lunch is held at Civic Center every weekday at Noon; this is when most arrests have occurred, when Mayor Jordan is actually watching from the Civic Center. Arrests also occur at dinner, which is held every day at 6 pm in Civic Center (most arrests are on weekdays). SF Food Not Bombs also serves lunch at Haight and Stanyan Mondays at Noon, but no arrests have occurred there.

Attend demonstrations and other special events. Call San Francisco Food Not Bombs at (415) 330-5030 for current information.

S.F. Food Not Bombs meetings are held Thursdays at 7:30 pm at Epicenter Zone, 475 Valencia St. at 16th. Get involved in maintaining Food Not Bombs and formulating a long term strategy.

Organize against Matrix. Call the Coalition on Homelessness (415) 346-3740 and get involved.

Get involved in Food Not Bombs wherever you are: Food Not Bombs groups exist in the East Bay, Santa Cruz, Sacramento, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Eugene, Portland, and across North America. East Bay Food Not Bombs can be reached at (510) 644-4187. Help mobilize regional support for San Francisco Food Not Bombs.

Watch the San Francisco police. Read the charges listed in the Matrix article in this newspaper. If we can document that police are illegally applying these laws, we may have a case for an injunction, and if we can document that police are applying these laws only to homeless people, and not to the general public, we may have a case for a class action suit.

Report incidents of police abuse to the Coalition on Homelessness, (415) 346-3740.

Pig Wilson Vetoes Needle Exchange Bill

October 8, 1993: "We cannot afford to threaten the credibility of our anti-drug effort."

With these words, Governor Pete Wilson showed his murderous scorn for thousands

West Oakland has a once-weekly underground exchange, ACE, which was last month busted by Oakland police. Sites in Berkeley and East Oakland, exchanging over 100 points a week

Matrix

Starting in August of this year, Mayor Frank Jordan of San Francisco implemented the Matrix Program, a massive mobilization of the police department against homeless people. Police have targeted homeless people for nuisance crimes, such as sleeping in public, public intoxication, blocking the sidewalk, urinating in public and aggressive panhandling. Not only are almost all of these activities legal in private, where homeless people often cannot go, but also are enforced almost exclusively on homeless people.

Besides hundreds of arrests and citations, a lot of homeless people's property has been confiscated. The Matrix program was at first applied only in the downtown area, but is being expanded to operate throughout the city.

Many laws are enforced illegally:

647 (i): no lodging on public or private property. Does not cover sleeping in parks in the daytime, as it is often enforced. It is actually defined as establishing some permanency in a place, ie. a campsite

647 (c): public intoxication. This statute requires that a person be too incapacitated to care for him/her self (a step beyond obviously, totally wasted) in order that that person be arrested.

647 (c): Blocking the sidewalk. You must show malice for this to be illegal; you must be deliberately blocking someone. Generally, you must refuse police orders to get out of the way to be arrested.

120-1: Aggressive panhandling. This crime requires a victim: For panhandling to be aggressive the panhandler must approach the panhandlee and be persistent, or use abusive or threatening language.

3.12 & 3.13 Park Code. Sleeping in parks from 10 pm - 6 am. No one can be arrested or evicted for sleeping during the day.

A New San Francisco

Former police chief Frank Jordan was elected mayor of San Francisco in 1991 on a platform of law and order; hatred of homeless people, immigrants, welfare recipients, protesters and more; and support for big business interests. His opponent, incumbent Art Agnos, faced a city's disgust after years of neglect for the real interests of San Franciscans, and voters wanted a change.

Under Art Agnos, San Francisco sought to

The program has caused great pain to the homeless but since there is no place to go, the number of people living on the streets only grows.

This summer activists in San Francisco have had relatively good success at resisting and exposing the inherently exploitative nature of the unrestrained corporate greed. Homes Not Jails, The Coalition On Homelessness, San Francisco Tenants Union, Empty The Shelters, Gray Panthers and many other groups have organized building take-overs, speak outs at public hearings and a blockade of the Trans Bay bus terminal when the city evicted 300 homeless into the police Matrix clamp down. The Mayor was host to The National Mayors Conference on Homelessness and Hunger but a counter Conference and Boycott called by homeless rights groups was effective. Only 5 of the original 35 invited mayors attended and the Clinton Administration's head of the Inter-Agency Task force was challenged to "show action or get out of the way."

Food Not Bombs held several large protests including one on September 29th where 53 people were arrested. The protests have included theater, signs, music, and arrests of food servers. Activists protested outside the Mayor's Pacific Heights (renamed 'Specific Whites') house on several occasions. October 6 brought out around 200 protesters and 75

continued on page 14

when most arrests have occurred, when Mayor Jordan is actually watching from the Civic Center. Arrests also occur at dinner, which is held every day at 6 pm in Civic Center (most arrests are on weekdays). SF Food Not Bombs also serves lunch at Haight and Stanyan Mondays at Noon, but no arrests have occurred there.

Attend demonstrations and other special events. Call San Francisco Food Not Bombs at (415) 330-5030 for current information.

S.F. Food Not Bombs meetings are held Thursdays at 7:30 pm at Epicenter Zone, 475 Valencia St. at 16th. Get involved in maintaining Food Not Bombs and formulating a long term strategy.

Pig Wilson Vetoes Needle Exchange Bill

October 8, 1993: "We cannot afford to threaten the credibility of our anti-drug effort."

With these words, Governor Pete Wilson showed his murderous scorn for thousands and thousands of Californians when his veto killed a bill that should have legalized pilot needle exchange programs in California. Wilson vetoed the same bill last year, saying that he needed more conclusive evidence that needle exchange works. Now, on the heels of an authoritative Center for Disease Control report (9/23) proving the effectiveness of needle exchange in preventing HIV transmission, one thing is very clear: Pete Wilson knows needle exchange works, and he knows that without it, people are going to keep dying, people who are generally poor, of color, and without established political power. And does Wilson care? Obviously not. What a cold motherfucker.

HIV infection among intravenous drug users (IVDU's) in the East Bay, for example, is becoming a horror story, 40 percent of IVDU's in Richmond are HIV positive, 30 percent in west Oakland, and rising. Right now, Richmond has no needle exchange sites;

Bay Santa Cruz, Sacramento, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Eugene, Portland, and across North America. East Bay Food Not Bombs can be reached at (510) 644-4187. Help mobilize regional support for San Francisco Food Not Bombs.

Watch the San Francisco police. Read the charges listed in the Matrix article in this newspaper. If we can document that police are illegally applying these laws, we may have a case for an injunction, and if we can document that police are applying these laws only to homeless people, and not to the general public, we may have a case for a class action suit.

Report incidents of police abuse to the Coalition on Homelessness, (415) 346-3740.

West Oakland has a once-weekly underground exchange, ACE, which was last month busted by Oakland police. Sites in Berkeley and East Oakland, exchanging over 100 points a week, are completely underground and volunteer-funded, and are having trouble making ends meet.

Needle exchange activists continue to run underground illegal exchanges in about 14 sites in the Bay Area. Exchange activists and drug users are pissed as hell at Wilson's murderous vote. On Friday Oct. 29, there will be a state-wide demo, called by ACT-UP, where needle exchange activists and users from all over the state will converge upon the capitol, armed with bucketful's of contaminated needles, and do some major damage to Pete Wilson's cold-killer peace of mind. Come support the needle exchange!

Major statewide ACT-UP demo planned for Oct. 29

Pete Wilson Political Funeral

Friday, Oct. 29, Noon

State Capitol Building, Sacramento

Info/carpool: 415 252-9200.

request that police take incapacitated care for him/her self (a step beyond obviously, totally wasted) in order that that person be arrested.

647 (c): Blocking the sidewalk. You must show malice for this to be illegal; you must be deliberately blocking someone. Generally, you must refuse police orders to get out of the way to be arrested.

120-1: Aggressive panhandling. This crime requires a victim: For panhandling to be aggressive the panhandler must approach the panhandlee and be persistent, or use abusive or threatening language.

3.12 & 3.13 Park Code. Sleeping in parks from 10 pm - 6 am. No one can be arrested or evicted for sleeping during the day.

A New San Francisco

Former police chief Frank Jordan was elected mayor of San Francisco in 1991 on a platform of law and order; hatred of homeless people, immigrants, welfare recipients, protesters and more; and support for big business interests. His opponent, incumbent Art Agnos, faced a city's disgust after years of neglect for the real interests of San Franciscans, and voters wanted a change.

Under Art Agnos, San Francisco sought to repress the homeless and support the hotel

continued on page 14

SLINGSHOT

Slingshot is an independent, radical newspaper published in the East Bay since 1988.

This issue has come together surprisingly easily in some ways, probably because the group is feeling more like a "collective" at the moment. There are a lot of good feelings of trust around our meetings, etc.

However, our usual problems remain. In order to publish this issue we went about $300 in debt. We did manage to pay off the debt from last issue, and if just a little more money would come in, we could do the paper more often and with less struggle surrounding the money aspect of it. If you can, give money, buy a t-shirt, etc..

Another problem with this issue is that the Slingshot computer failed just days before we were to start working on the issue. Some people suspect sabotage; others just figure bad luck. In either case, if anyone has a Macintosh computer that they can donate, or if anyone can help us repair our existing system, let us know.

Slingshot welcomes letters, article submissions, art, photographs and volunteers. We don't always all agree with everything we print.

This issue might mark the last issue that we are "registered" with Berkeley as a student paper. We have maintained this connection because it allows us to use their bulk mailing permit, although the paper has had a non-student focus for some time. We'd appreciate it if the zines, etc., that review us would stop saying stuff like "This student paper..." Also, if anyone has any ideas of non-profit organizations with bulk mailing permits that we could hook up with, let us know. We still welcome students to get involved in the paper and some of us are students. Until we sever bureaucratic ties with the beast, we must print this:

"This publication is not an official publication of the Associated Students of the University of California. The views expressed herein are the views of the writers, only. They are not necessarily the views of the associated students of the University of California nor the University of California at Berkeley."

Printed October 19, 1993

Letters to Slingshot

Slingshot of immense value

Dear editor,

I came across the name of your journal "Slingshot" and I think it should be of immense value for my studies of international Politics.

Dr. S—

University of Keleniya, Sri Lanka

Slingshot: Piss off!

Dear Slingshot:

Thank you ever so much for the diagram in your last issue on the proper way to urinate. As a male I recognize the role I play in re-enforcing the values of the patriarchy by leaving the toilet seat up for females. In fact, I am now starting a major educational program to inform males of their oppressive role, since the beginning of the flush toilet, towards females. I shall also educate all my sisters as to how male urination DOES indeed oppress them. SISTERS! Don't take this oppression sitting down--uh, er--standing up! Thank you Slingshot, for showing me the truly Revolutionary Way to defecate!

--Anon

"Informative in a new way"

Dear Slingshot:

I recently picked up a copy of your paper while in Marysville at the gathering of the vibes. I found your paper informative in a new way. I am glad to see an anti-authoritarian movement that doesn't involve hate. I have always felt we need more love in this world, but found you can't embrace this lame excuse for a system.

suggestion that a man coming upon a woman while walking should cross the street. I don't believe that most women would want that kind of dictatorial control, or the assumption that they are too weak to deal with male presence, even if unfriendly.

The last point in Wombman's list is "patriarchy is compartmentalism, commodification, commercialization and property." Nope, that's capitalism, which is not simply another version of patriarchy. The failure to understand this can only result in bad theory and practice. Capitalism could even survive the end of patriarchy, at least theoretically, although the ideological and managerial advantages that patriarchy offers (plus the fact that most capitalists are sexist assholes) makes it unlikely that the capitalists would embark on such an undertaking. Both capitalism and patriarchy (as well as anthropocentrism, racism,...) have to be overthrown, and confusing them as being the same most likely will result in no change at all.

Wombman is rather quick to condemn men in their 40's and older, especially white men, as "red-neck macho" types (blacks and latinos aren't, I suppose), while younger men to him seem to embody more wholistic, blended personalities. As a 45 year old white man, who's resided in this community for over 20 years, that's not at all my experience, even on the Berkeley campus. In fact I strongly resent such stereotyping. By all means let's talk of what positive behavior is. But why create new divisions, especially when there's precious little evidence to base them on?

And by the way, the accompanying cartoon on

Response to Sparrow 13: Gay bosses are still bosses

Dear Slingshot,

Well, it's taken me a few weeks after reading it, but I finally must respond to the letter you ran from Sparrow 13 (in yer Spring 1993 issue [Slingshot is Classist, Heterosexist]). I'm not exactly sure whether Fellow Worker Sparrow (whatever hir gender affiliations) is raging into the light or simply beating hir wings on the light bulb, and indeed I've been tempted to blow the whole thing off as simply another semi-illuminated hit piece against any sign of change in the world in general, and the gay ghetto in particular. However, now that I'm actually finding time to catch up on my correspondence, I came across said letter again, and what else can I say? I must respond. Truly, I gotta admit that I resent being branded "assimilationist" and basically homophobic, let alone characterized as a man.

According to Sparrow 13, I bear personal responsibility for (and I quote): "straight male IWW supporters outside a gay bar (the End Up in San Francisco) harassing, insulting and intimidating the gay patrons during the October 18 "demonstrations" instigated by a well-known...."

Well, let's stop right there for a minute, and get back to the quote. Sparrow 13 presumes the sexuality of IWW supporters?!? After all this ranting about how "white trash" workers are fags too, and cool and stuff? For the information of both Sparrow 13 and Slingshot's reading public, there were many queer wobbles, both former End Up janitors and otherwise, walking that line, as well as many other labor and queer activists. That "demonstration" is that they can donate, or if anyone can help us repair our existing system, let us know.

Slingshot welcomes letters, article submissions, art, photographs and volunteers. We don't always all agree with everything we print.

This issue might mark the last issue that we are "registered" with Berkeley as a student paper. We have maintained this connection because it allows us to use their bulk mailing permit, although the paper has had a non-student focus for some time. We'd appreciate it if the zines, etc., that review us would stop saying stuff like "This student paper..." Also, if anyone has any ideas of non-profit organizations with bulk mailing permits that we could hook up with, let us know. We still welcome students to get involved in the paper and some of us are students. Until we sever bureaucratic ties with the beast, we must print this:

"This publication is not an official publication of the Associated Students of the University of California. The views expressed herein are the views of the writers, only. They are not necessarily the views of the associated students of the University of California nor the University of California at Berkeley."

Printed October 19, 1993

Volume 1, Number 50

Circulation: 5000

Mailing Address: 700 Eshleman Hall
Berkeley, CA 94720

Phone: (510) 848-6466; Email: resist@igc.apc.org

An ASUC Sponsored Publication

All Events are Wheelchair Accessible

Circulation Information:

BULK QUANTITIES: Papers are free for distribution in the larger Bay Area if you pick them up yourself. Call our number for information. If you want to distribute papers in other cities or towns, we will send you bulk amounts for the cost of printing plus postage as follows:

US Priority 2 day Mail: $5 for 15 copies

US Slow--1 wk service: $6 for 25 copies

International--Air Mail: Varies. Send $

International--Slow: $2.50 for 7 copies

Certain back issues are also available for postage or for 50 cents to $1.50 for rare issues. Send us some money and we'll send you random copies.

Or ask for the issue # you want and we'll send it.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: Subscriptions are sold by issue, not by year. Send $1 per issue. If you want our latest issue after we have done our bulk mailing, send $2. Prisoners can subscribe for free. International subs are $1.50 per issue.

Dr. S---

University of Keleniya, Sri Lanka

Slingshot: Piss off!

Dear Slingshot:

Thank you ever so much for the diagram in your last issue on the proper way to urinate. As a male I recognize the role I play in re-enforcing the values of the patriarchy by leaving the toilet seat up for females. In fact, I am now starting a major educational program to inform males of their oppressive role, since the beginning of the flush toilet, towards females. I shall also educate all my sisters as to how male urination DOES indeed oppress them. SISTERS! Don't take this oppression sitting down--uh, er--standing up! Thank you Slingshot, for showing me the truly Revolutionary Way to defecate!

--Anon

"Informative in a new way"

Dear Slingshot:

I recently picked up a copy of your paper while in Marysville at the gathering of the vibes. I found your paper informative in a new way. I am glad to see an anti-authoritarian movement that doesn't involve hate. I have always felt we need more love in this world, but found you can't embrace this lame excuse for a system.

I live in Southern California, a place where people are too shallow to care about anything but their cars. I don't know if you could get a revolution started here (with the exception of the non-white community.) But some of us are tryin'.

--Bomber

ANALYSIS BREAKDOWN

Most of the points made in the article on patriarchy ("Breaking Down Patriarchy", Summer issue) were right on the mark. Three of them, however, were deeply problematic.

The first one talks of "the absence of female energy in a male." If you are referring to nurturing, tenderness and the like, you are actually accepting the very ground rules of patriarchy, whose definition of "man" precludes these qualities. Calling such qualities "female" energy hardly amounts to a supersession of the present ground rules. Perhaps greater precision is in order.

Further down, Wombman states the "patriarchy is the exertion of male presence over the female when she is in any way intimidated by that presence." (emphasis mine) Male intimidation is without a doubt one of the worst aspects of patriarchy. But the statement as worded is so vague and all-encompassing as to be easily misconstrued. Can it mean that if a woman is intimidated by the presence of men in a friend's house she's visiting, she has the right to demand that all men leave the house? Or that a woman has a right to demand that men not walk on the last point in Wombman's list is "patriarchy is compartmentalism, commodification, commercialization and property." Nope, that's capitalism, which is not simply another version of patriarchy. The failure to understand this can only result in bad theory and practice. Capitalism could even survive the end of patriarchy, at least theoretically, although the ideological and managerial advantages that patriarchy offers (plus the fact that most capitalists are sexist assholes) makes it unlikely that the capitalists would embark on such an undertaking. Both capitalism and patriarchy (as well as anthropocentrism, racism,...) have to be overthrown, and confusing them as being the same most likely will result in no change at all.

Wombman is rather quick to condemn men in their 40's and older, especially white men, as "red-neck macho" types (blacks and latinos aren't, i suppose), while younger men to him seem to embody more wholistic, blended personalities. As a 45 year old white man, who's resided in this community for over 20 years, that's not at all my experience, even on the Berkeley campus. In fact i strongly resent such stereotyping. By all means let's talk of what positive behavior is. But why create new divisions, especially when there's precious little evidence to base them on?

And by the way, the accompanying cartoon on the "correct" way to piss is insulting and stupid. Even if the intent was humor (i hope so), this graphic epitomizes an anti-penis ideology which some people think (why i don't know) is a necessary part of fighting patriarchy.

--Jack Straw

Greetings from Prison

Dear Slingshot:

Thank you for getting in contact with me. By now you should have received a copy of my prison newsletter, but if not, please let me know...

I would like to write a word or two about the absolute possibility of "mental revolution" in the joint. What we need to do is look past the bullshit that got us here and the bullshit we continue to perpetuate.

Thanks for keeping me on the mailing list. I always share Slingshot with whom ever will actually read it. The guards (screws) call me the "subversive commie-nigger."

Also enclosed is a classified ad I'm trying to get printed in zines 'round this "great land of ours."

Help! Incarcerated brown male wishing to begin educational future while incarcerated. Must raise $500 to enroll in college program offered by Ohio State University for the 94-95 school year. I need to reach out to 50 people in the entire USA willing to invest $10 apiece into my education. I can't do it myself. I'm not afraid to ask, are you afraid to help. Please contact me for details.

Paul X Prison No. 205398

Chippewa Regional Correctional Facility

but I finally must respond to the letter you ran from Sparrow 13 (in yer Spring 1993 issue [Slingshot is Classist, Heterosexist]). I'm not exactly sure whether Fellow Worker Sparrow (whatever hir gender affiliations) is raging into the light or simply beating hir wings on the light bulb, and indeed I've been tempted to blow the whole thing off as simply another semi-illuminated hit piece against any sign of change in the world in general, and the gay ghetto in particular. However, now that I'm actually finding time to catch up on my correspondence, I came across said letter again, and what else can I say? I must respond. Truly, I gotta admit that I resent being branded "assimilationist" and basically homophobic, let alone characterized as a man.

According to Sparrow 13, I bear personal responsibility for (and I quote): "straight male IWW supporters outside a gay bar (the End Up in San Francisco) harassing, insulting and intimidating the gay patrons during the October 18 "demonstrations" instigated by a well-known...."

Well, let's stop right there for a minute, and get back to the quote. Sparrow 13 presumes the sexuality of IWW supporters?!? After all this ranting about how "white trash" workers are fags too, and cool and stuff? For the information of both Sparrow 13 and Slingshot's reading public, there were many queer wobbles, both former End Up janitors and otherwise, walking that line, as well as many other labor and queer activists. That "demonstration" is more accurately termed a picket line, and anyone from West Virginia who doesn't know the difference is not really aware of hir people's history, of what a labor dispute means, straight or gay. As for the picket we held against the End Up management on October 18, well, that would have been the night of the Crash Worship show, which is probably the only thing that compelled Sparrow 13 into that hole known as the End Up to begin with. I know Sparrow 13 goes to Crash Worship shows for cultural reasons, and so must know what bad characterization it is to call a Crash Worship Crowd "gay patrons." Indeed, Crash Worship show-goers are of all sexualities, races, gender identifications, and (yes) economic classes. As for the harassment, etc., part, if that were so, why didn't the cops, there at the behest of End Up management (including the drunk and provocative general manager, Doug "the Slug" Whitmore) simply haul us away, as they were so obviously desperate to do? To this day, I'm not entirely sure, considering how said police dealt with our highly-successful liquor-blockading picket line. What I am sure of is that Sparrow 13 badly misread the entirety of the situation, not only that night but in general, and due in large part to prejudice and denial on hir part.

Back to the quote in progress: "...instigated by a well-known 'alternative' assimilationist (what other words describe a gay man who has frequently attacked his fellow homos verbally and in print, and is quoted in your own rag praising is breeder pals at the expense of 'most qav people?')"

Berkeley, CA 94720
Phone: (510) 848-6466; Email: resist@igc.apc.org
An ASUC Sponsored Publication
All Events are Wheelchair Accessible

Circulation Information:

BULK QUANTITIES: Papers are free for distribution in the larger Bay Area if you pick them up yourself. Call our number for information. If you want to distribute papers in other cities or towns, we will send you bulk amounts for the cost of printing plus postage as follows:

US Priority 2 day Mail: $5 for 15 copies

US Slow-1 wk service: $6 for 25 copies

International-Air Mail: Varies. Send $

International-Slow: $2.50 for 7 copies

Certain back issues are also available for postage or for 50 cents to $1.50 for rare issues. Send us some money and we'll send you random copies. Or ask for the issue if you want and we'll send it.

SUBSCRIPTIONS: Subscriptions are sold by issue, not by year. Send $1 per issue. If you want our latest issue after we have done our bulk mailing, send $2. Prisoners can subscribe for free. International subs are $1.50 per issue.

tion started here (with the exception of the non-white community.) But some of us are tryin'.

--Bomber

ANALYSIS BREAKDOWN

Most of the points made in the article on patriarchy ("Breaking Down Patriarchy", Summer issue) were right on the mark. Three of them, however, were deeply problematic.

The first one talks of "the absence of female energy in a male." If you are referring to nurturing, tenderness and the like, you are actually accepting the very ground rules of patriarchy, whose definition of "man" precludes these qualities. Calling such qualities "female" energy hardly amounts to a supersession of the present ground rules. Perhaps greater precision is in order.

Further down, Wombman states the "patriarchy is the exertion of male presence over the female when she is in any way intimidated by that presence." (emphasis mine) Male intimidation is without a doubt one of the worst aspects of patriarchy. But the statement as worded is so vague and all-encompassing as to be easily misconstrued. Can it mean that if a woman is intimidated by the presence of men in a friend's house she's visiting, she has the right to demand that all men leave the house? Or that a woman has a right to demand that men not walk on the same street as her? I have actually seen a some people think (why I don't know) is a necessary part of fighting patriarchy.

--Jack Straw

Greetings from Prison

Dear Slingshot:

Thank you for getting in contact with me. By now you should have received a copy of my prison newsletter, but if not, please let me know...

I would like to write a word or two about the absolute possibility of "mental revolution" in the joint. What we need to do is look past the bullshit that got us here and the bullshit we continue to perpetuate.

Thanks for keeping me on the mailing list. I always share Slingshot with whom ever will actually read it. The guards (screws) call me the "subversive commie-nigger."

Also enclosed is a classified ad I'm trying to get printed in zines 'round this "great land of ours."

Help! Incarcerated brown male wishing to begin educational future while incarcerated. Must raise $500 to enroll in college program offered by Ohio State University for the 94-95 school year. I need to reach out to 50 people in the entire USA willing to invest $10 apiece into my education. I can't do it myself. I'm not afraid to ask, are you afraid to help. Please contact me for details.

Paul X Prison No. 205398

Chippewa Regional Correctional Facility
Kincheloe, MI 49784

labor dispute means, straight or gay. As for the picket we held against the End Up management on October 18, well, that would have been the night of the Crash Worship show, which is probably the only thing that compelled Sparrow 13 into that hole known as the End Up to begin with. I know Sparrow 13 goes to Crash Worship shows for cultural reasons, and so must know what bad characterization it is to call a Crash Worship Crowd "gay patrons." Indeed, Crash Worship show-goers are of all sexualities, races, gender identifications, and (yes) economic classes. As for the harassment, etc., part, if that were so, why didn't the cops, there at the behest of End Up management (including the drunk and provocative general manager, Doug "the Slug" Whitmore) simply haul us away, as they were so obviously desperate to do? To this day, I'm not entirely sure, considering how said police dealt with our highly-successful liquor-blockading picket line. What I am sure of is that Sparrow 13 badly misread the entirety of the situation, not only that night but in general, and due in large part to prejudice and denial on his part.

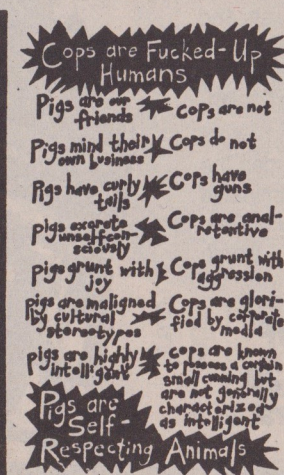

Back to the quote in progress: "...instigated by a well-known 'alternative' assimilationist (what other words describe a gay man who has frequently attacked his fellow homos verbally and in print, and is quoted in your own rag praising is breeder pals at the expense of 'most gay people'?)"

Continued on Page 15

Mail Order Slingshot t-shirts

(Front)

A

(Back)

B

Read
SLINGSHOT
Smash the University
Have a nice Day

C

D

E

All shirts are $10* Sizes available: (S, M, L, XL, XXL) Colors available: Black, white, red, gold, purple, pink, dark green, navy blue, turquoise, light green. (Or request one and we'll try to get it.)

Shirt You Want	Size	Color--1st Choice	2nd Choice	Quant. X $10	=Total

Mail this form with a check (no name filled in) or cash to Slingshot, 700 Eshleman Hall, T-shirt division, Berkeley, CA 94720. * used or slightly damaged shirts are also available for $8. light ink

Add $2 for postage
TOTAL

HOMES NOT JAILS

By Jackie Goldmyn

Homes Not Jails takes over vacant housing, using two tactics, covert squatting and public action. Since Homes Not Jails was founded in November 1992, the group has taken about 100 buildings covertly. About 10 of these are considered successes because they lasted six weeks or longer.

Only covert squatting can create a squat, but public actions can provide effective support in the struggle for a squat. Recently 837 Hayes Street, a former squat, was put up for auction by the FDIC which owns the building. Two members of Homes Not Jails bicycled to Pleasanton where the auction was being held, distributed fliers to prospective buyers warning them that the sale of 837 Hayes Street is illegal under the McKinney Act, announced that Homes Not Jails had seized the building, and finally put in a bid of "one dollar plus justice." No one else bid.

The McKinney Act requires that unused and underutilized federal property be used for the homeless. Federal agencies like the FDIC, and the Department of Justice in the case of the 1211 Polk Street building, claim to be "exempt" from the Act. They deny that they are land-holding agencies. Homes Not Jails member Ted Gullicksen points out that the government has only two properties listed as eligible under the McKinney Act -- both are (undesigned) toxic waste dumps.

Although Homes Not Jails has been referred to as an anarchist group (to the annoyance of non-anarchist members), it has taken some work to transform the group from a male- and heterosexual- dominated group to one which Queer women members are satisfied is functional and supportive.

When I was arrested with nine other Homes Not Jails members during the August 24 public takeover of 1211 Polk Street, we women had plenty of time (over 48 hours) in which to talk politics. One woman brought up her frustration with Homes Not Jails being spoken of as an anarchist group, pointing out that the squat movement cannot limit itself by allowing sectarianism.

Gender politics were also discussed. Women had been marginalized at meetings; then at one meeting a woman requested that the meeting be chaired by a woman. She was asked to chair that meeting; subsequently women have spoken more and taken a more active part in decision-making.

When I interviewed Anne Mattis, a member of Homes Not Jails, she noted that the Queer-consciousness of the Red Balloon squat has also helped to radicalize Homes Not Jails. Many of the members of the squat (at 1211 Polk Street) and their supporters were Queer. The energy of the squat affected Homes Not Jails, bringing more Queers into the group and providing the support for older members to come out.

How To Start A Squat

"Anyone can do it," Anne Mattis says of squatting. "What it takes is a pair of bolt cutters or a gloved fist through a window ...

continued on page 15

Fall 1993 • Berkeley, California • Slingshot • Page 3

DAMN UC REGENTS:

ACCOUNTABLE TO WHOM?

A move is afoot to somewhat decentralize the University of California's corporate style of governance that was created over a hundred years ago by and for rich white men. The Regents of the University of California are mandated in the state constitution to be a public corporation made up primarily by governor appointees who serve 12 year terms. Customarily, the Regent appointments have been political favors. Today's Regents have individually an average minimum reported wealth of $700,000, (without looking too deeply), and head more than four companies each. Ordinary human concerns are obviously not of much interest to these decision makers. Reforms adopted in 1974 provide that "regents shall be able persons broadly reflective of the economic, cultural, and social diversity of the state, including ethnic minorities and women." No means for implementation have occurred in the nearly 20 years since that adoption.

The regents decisions have countered community will and trust as they have involved our public University in nuclear weapons, biotech, union busting, abusive and unaccountable policing, and bully tactics that force development on communities while using local sewage and fire protection without compensation. Only change at the state constitutional level will curb this freakish blend of corporate military takeover of community life, that hides behind a remnant thread of nostalgia about "free thought and inquiring minds being encouraged." Student concerns about skyrocketing fees, dwindling classes, and erosion of quality faculty have joined faculty and campus staff frustrations about dollars for the few at the top with ever burgeoning scandals of golden parachutes for the top officials. Currently the Regents weapons contractor with 6 new weapons systems in '93 at Livermore and 2 more slated for '94), is the single largest stockholder in Georgia Pacific which clear cuts old growth redwoods, and has at least 50 major construction projects slated for the little town of Berkeley by 2005 in the Regents' Long Range Development Plan that got almost no input from the actual people who lived there. Info from other communities adjacent to campuses is scant but growing and similar.

The move to "democratize the UC Regents" is to place on the 1994 ballot a constitutional amendment that will change the make up of the board and some of its stated goals. In addition to limiting top officials' salaries, one important feature will be the creation of campus councils on each of the 9 campuses. On these councils will be 5 faculty, 5 staff, 5 students, (all elected) and 5 from the neighboring city and county (to be selected by election or appointment depending on the preference of the community). These councils will then appoint a Regent (one from each campus council), and there will be an additional 9 Regents elected state wide to represent the overall state citizen concerns. Over a million signatures are needed to be sure of getting this initiative on the ballot by February; also endorsements and donations are sought from labor unions and other organizations who hope for some kind of accountability in how life is (undesignated) toxic waste dumps. Although Homes Not Jails has been referred to as an anarchist group (to the annoyance of non-anarchist members), it has taken some

continued on page 15

On Immigration

Three years ago a pilot TV ad with this script ran in Houston.

Scene: Intense traffic congestion on a highway. 3 people in a car. 2 men, 1 woman. All 3 white.

Dialogue: First Voice: "Look at all these people. Where do they come from?" Second Voice: "Traffic is awful and it will get worse if these politicians get their way. The paper says they want to let in millions more immigrants. Millions?" First voice: "WHAT! Where are we going to put them. Who's going to feed them?" Third voice: "Yes millions more immigrants.

always blamed the least able to defend themselves for social hardship. What is scary now is that this hateful message has found resonance with precisely those who should recognize that it is they who are being targeted too. It is no longer just well established, well

continued on page 15

WHAT ARE BORDERS?

Those lines men have drawn on their maps are not borders — although that's mostly been the story of how they have been codified and conceptualized historically. Neither are the

our public University in nuclear weapons, biotech, union busting, abusive and unaccountable policing, and bully tactics that force development on communities while using local sewage and fire protection without compensation. Only change at the state constitutional level will curb this freakish blend of corporate military takeover of community life, that hides behind a remnant thread of nostalgia about "free thought and inquiring minds being encouraged." Student concerns about skyrocketing fees, dwindling classes, and erosion of quality faculty have joined faculty and campus staff frustrations about dollars for the few at the top with ever burgeoning scandals of golden parachutes for the top officials. Currently the Regents manage the laboratories at Livermore and Los Alamos (the largest "non-corporate" nuclear to limiting top officials' salaries, one important feature will be the creation of campus councils on each of the 9 campuses. On these councils will be 5 faculty, 5 staff, 5 students, (all elected) and 5 from the neighboring city and county (to be selected by election or appointment depending on the preference of the community). These councils will then appoint a Regent (one from each campus council), and there will be an additional 9 Regents elected state wide to represent the overall state citizen concerns. Over a million signatures are needed to be sure of getting this initiative on the ballot by February; also endorsements and donations are sought from labor unions and other organizations who hope for some kind of accountability in how life is designed. Help is wanted. (415) 647-2775 or check out the mid-day table on Sproul.

PEACE ACTIVISTS JAILED

Aug. 6, 1993 two women spray painted silhouettes of children at play at Livermore Weapons Labs as a memorial to the thousands who died at Hiroshima and Nagasaki from bombs created at the labs. This was also a warning about the 6 new weapons systems slated for 1993 and 2 more in 1994. In Sept. Maxina Ventura and Susan Crane were found guilty in a jury trial. The judge was a former DA who prosecuted protesters at the labs 10 years ago. Max and Susan refused probation, feeling that it compromised activists' freedom of expression in civil disobedience. The judge gave them 2 months each and $1350 in fines and restitution. Both are in Santa Rita and would appreciate letters.

Maxina Ventura or Susan Crane
(Ingrid Landes) PSN AJV529
PSN APP375

Alameda Co. Sheriff Dept.
5325 Broder
Dublin, CA : 94568

Barrington Hall Repurchased by Co-op Association

Barrington Hall, currently named Huddlestone Hall, was a large 180-member student cooperative located on Dwight Way in the south campus area that once housed a tradition of student cultural and political dissidence. It was closed down and sold by the student co-op association several years ago mostly from pressures from the "war on drugs" and several enthusiastic partisans of Berkeley's rightward slide.

Now, however, the University Students Cooperative Association (USCA) has just purchased the building from the man they sold it to, Roger Huddlestone, because he was unable to make the payments. The building was repurchased for about $2 million. Rumor has it that most people on the USCA's Board of Directors (students) are scared of what might happen if Barrington is reopened as a co-op. The Board has not yet decided how it will be run (apartments, co-op, zoo, etc.) The Association is also likely to foreclose on Mr. Huddlestone's house in some random suburb to get left over money from him.

--N. Waters

claimed. And, fed by and feeding all of those, the ruling classes of those states were developing the beginnings of industrial capitalism, forcing their "own" common people off

On Immigration

Three years ago a pilot TV ad with this script ran in Houston.

Scene: Intense traffic congestion on a highway. 3 people in a car. 2 men, 1 woman. All 3 white.

Dialogue: First Voice: "Look at all these people. Where do they come from?" Second Voice: "Traffic is awful and it will get worse if these politicians get their way. The paper says they want to let in millions more immigrants. Millions?" First voice: "WHAT! Where are we going to put them. Who's going to feed them?" Third voice: "Yes millions more immigrants. We have got more homeless than we can feed now. What about jobs, health care costs. Where's the housing? It's just not fair."

The ad was paid for by the Federation for American Immigration Reform.

Besides the amusement value and obvious absurdity of blaming immigrants, who are by definition ineligible for social services, for traffic problems and inadequate social services, the ad nicely illustrates how marginalized people are being scapegoated and portrayed as the causes of social dislocation caused by predatory capitalism 1990's style.

The powerful, be they state functionaries, representatives of capital or the media, have always blamed the least able to defend themselves for social hardship. What is scary now is that this hateful message has found resonance with precisely those who should recognize that it is they who are being targeted too. It is no longer just well established, well

continued on page 15

WHAT ARE BORDERS?

Those lines men have drawn on their maps are not borders — although that's mostly been the story of how they have been codified and conceptualized historically. Neither are the fences, walls, moats, razor wire, etc., which mark their location physically on the land; nor the guards, soldiers, migra, cops, ... with their guns and tanks and planes which enforce them. But that's getting warmer. The "Border" is shorthand for a whole set of social relations, defined and enforced by a state representing a ruling class. It is that particular ruling class which established, by violence, its control over a particular area of the earth, proclaiming "This is our turf. All upon it is ours, to destroy, exploit and oppress — every person and every other animal, tree, stream and rock ... from sea to shining sea." It is at the same time a declaration of war to every other state and

PEACE ACTIVISTS JAILED

Aug. 6, 1993 two women spray painted silhouettes of children at play at Livermore Weapons Labs as a memorial to the thousands who died at Hiroshima and Nagasaki from bombs created at the labs. This was also a warning about the 6 new weapons systems slated for 1993 and 2 more in 1994. In Sept. Maxina Ventura and Susan Crane were found guilty in a jury trial. The judge was a former DA who prosecuted protesters at the labs 10 years ago. Max and Susan refused probation, feeling that it compromised activists' freedom of expression in civil disobedience. The judge gave them 2 months each and $1350 in fines and restitution. Both are in Santa Rita and would appreciate letters.

Maxina Ventura or Susan Crane
(Ingrid Landes) PSN AJV529
PSN APP375

Alameda Co. Sheriff Dept.
5325 Broder
Dublin, CA 94568

Barrington Hall Repurchased by Co-op Association

Barrington Hall, currently named Huddlestone Hall, was a large 180-member student cooperative located on Dwight Way in the south campus area that once housed a tradition of student cultural and political dissidence. It was closed down and sold by the student co-op association several years ago mostly from pressures from the "war on drugs" and several enthusiastic partisans of Berkeley's rightward slide.

Now, however, the University Students Cooperative Association (USCA) has just purchased the building from the man they sold it to, Roger Huddlestone, because he was unable to make the payments. The building was repurchased for about $2 million. Rumor has it that most people on the USCA's Board of Directors (students) are scared of what might happen if Barrington is reopened as a co-op. The Board has not yet decided how it will be run (apartments, co-op, zoo, etc.) The Association is also likely to foreclose on Mr. Huddlestone's house in some random suburb to get left over money from him.

--N. Waters

its borders. To see borders in this way is to understand that in order to tear down the borders we must tear down the state and tear down the ruling class — it'll take a social revolution to overthrow this social relation.

Take a real look at the borders of the U.S. — how they were established, what they're used for, how they're enforced....

Five hundred years ago there were no borders here. The people living here were burdened by no state(s). They made no claims to own the areas they lived with. "Foreigners," backed by the rising European states of Spain, England, France and the Netherlands created the first borders by murdering the people living on these lands and claiming it as theirs, or their king's, pope's or god's. These same states murdered, kidnapped and enslaved the people of Africa to exploit this land they claimed. And, fed by and feeding all of those, the ruling classes of those states were developing the beginnings of industrial capitalism, forcing their "own" common people off their lands and into the workshops by murder and famine.

The U.S. ruling class has spared nothing and no one, has shied from no atrocity in their efforts to construct their borders. It took them nearly 400 years — and countless millions of murders — to establish them as they are today. Realizing this, realizing how hard and how long how many people fought against this state and its borders — and seeing what a disaster has resulted from its "success" — should help us realize that the idea tearing down the border is both realistic and necessary.

Tear Down The Borders Committee

Refusing Military Work in a 'Control Unit' Armed and Dangerous

by political prisoner Raymond Luc Levasseur
Marion Prison

When I was transferred to the U.S. penitentiary in Marion, Illinois in December, 1989, Panama was being invaded by U.S. politicians and military leaders an awesome display of American firepower designed to impose its will on yet another Central American nation. Weapons systems from land, sea, and air were utilized, along with the basic M16 to kill whoever stood in the line of fire. Whether technologically advanced or as simple as a grenade, this war material is made in the U.S.A.--some of it by federal prisoners.

The Federal Prison Industries, Inc. (UNICOR) is one of the manufacturers that supplies military equipment to the bloated U.S. war machine. UNICOR has served this function since 1934 under contract to the War Department, now known euphemistically as the Department of Defense. The Federal Bureau of Prisons (BoP) boasts that the slave labor of prisoners, under hazardous conditions, and at an entry level wage of 23 cents an hour has and continues to make significant contributions towards supplying the military's needs. It also boasts of using UNICOR to control prisoners within its vastly overcrowded system.

UNICOR's military production ranges from TOW and other missile cables, munitions components, communications equipment, bomb parts, engine overhauls, uniform sewing, etc. In its brochures, the BoP proudly displays photographs of prisoners working hard producing this material. As a Viet Nam veteran, I was particularly struck by a photo of Federal prisoners producing equipment destined for Viet Nam. Unlike most prisoners, I transfer" unit before approval is granted for transfer to a less brutal prison. It is a scheme the administration exploits to the hilt because they understand that Marion prisoners are desperate to leave its punishment cells, isolation, and tomb-like conditions.

While all federal prisoners are required to work, they are not required to work UNICOR, though 26% do so. Most prisoners opt to work in other areas such as food service or maintenance, or pursue the very limited educational or vocational programs available. USP-Marion is the single exception in the Federal prison system because it mandates that prisoners work UNICOR as a condition of transfer. The only work at Marion's UNICOR is military production.

The Bureau of Prisons has parried Freedom of Information Act requests to disclose detailed information about war production at Marion. However, this much is known: UNICOR Marion produces electronics communications cables which it sells to the War Department. These cables are used in various ground vehicles, such as tanks and Armored Personnel Carriers, and production line supervisors have bragged that the cables are used in helicopters. During the Gulf War, the prisoners working UNICOR Marion were compelled to do overtime production.

The U.S. has made much of China's use of prison labor for textile and other exports to the U.S. market. This is said to be a human rights abuse (i.e., that it cuts into the profits of U.S. corporations). The latest controversy revolved around christmas tree ornaments manufactured by Chinese prisoners and exported to the U.S. To my knowledge no one has ever been killed by an attack from a christmas tree ornament, yet tons of military equipment, for which all 2

Clinton Health Care Reform as Power Grab

America's health care industry is in severe need of restructuring. The reform plan developed by the secretive task force headed by Hillary Clinton and Ira Magaziner does in my opinion address several major problems with the present status quo which leaves tens of millions of Americans without adequate health care coverage. It does however constitute a major power grab by the medical establishment away from community-based and alternative forms of health care. It does considerably increase the power of the state to regulate and control our lives. It does not look at the role of large corporate industrial and "post-industrial" capitalism in necessitating unhealthy "lifestyles" for most of America's workers and unemployed. It does not significantly get to the roots of homelessness and poverty, to the social inequities of opportunity and living conditions that are a significant source of illness in our society.

Within the Clinton health care plan there is a move to defund cost-effective community-based health clinics like the Berkeley Free Clinic and many others, and to shift funding yet more to large impersonal medical establishments like HMOs. There is a major move in Alameda County, starting this month and with no time for general public debate, to pick their salads. This is major source of Hepatitis A transmission to yuppies. So let them pick their own salad twelve hours a day for indecent wages.

Consider what it means to clinics like the Berkeley Free Clinic that have philosophies of medicine which run contrary to that of the medical establishment. Consider what it means for the future of feminist clinics. Consider what it means to local gay or bisexual men if instead of the Gay Men's Health Collective they had to go for treatment and confidentiality to some straight HMO doctor who doesn't have any real feeling or connection to their concerns. Remember that the Governor who vetoed gay partners legislation would have some major say in what kind of health care gay men and women would receive.

Consider what it means if you are an American Indian or a Chinese person with an alternative cultural approach to medicine than that sanctioned by the American Medical Association (A.M.A.). Consider what it will mean to you if you prefer herbal and other non-Federal Drug Administration (F.D.A.) approaches to healing, alternatives to the use of antibiotics and the overuse of physically and psychologically invasive surgeries. Consider, readers of Slingshot, what managed care will

U.S.A.--some of it by federal prisoners. The Federal Prison Industries, Inc. (UNICOR) is one of the manufacturers that supplies military equipment to the bloated U.S. war machine. UNICOR has served this function since 1934 under contract to the War Department, now known euphemistically as the Department of Defense. The Federal Bureau of Prisons (BoP) boasts that the slave labor of prisoners, under hazardous conditions, and at an entry level wage of 23 cents an hour has and continues to make significant contributions towards supplying the military's needs. It also boasts of using UNICOR to control prisoners within its vastly overcrowded system.

UNICOR's military production ranges from TOW and other missile cables, munitions components, communications equipment, bomb parts, engine overhauls, uniform sewing, etc. In its brochures, the BoP proudly displays photographs of prisoners working hard producing this material. As a Viet Nam veteran, I was particularly struck by a photo of Federal prisoners producing equipment destined for Viet Nam. Unlike most prisoners, I got to see with my own eyes the lethal effect of the end product.

It is the priority of UNICOR to provide for the military's needs, whether it was during the Korean War when 80% of UNICOR sales went to the military, or the Gulf War when prisoners were pressed into overtime. In fact, the military has its own representative on transfer. The Bureau of Prisons has parried Freedom of Information Act requests to disclose detailed information about war production at Marion. However, this much is known: UNICOR Marion produces electronics communications cables which it sells to the War Department. These cables are used in various ground vehicles, such as tanks and Armored Personnel Carriers, and production line supervisors have bragged that the cables are used in helicopters. During the Gulf War, the prisoners working UNICOR Marion were compelled to do overtime production.

The U.S. has made much of China's use of prison labor for textile and other exports to the U.S. market. This is said to be a human rights abuse (i.e., that it cuts into the profits of U.S. corporations). The latest controversy revolved around christmas tree ornaments manufactured by Chinese prisoners and exported to the U.S. To my knowledge no one has ever been killed by an attack from a christmas tree ornament, yet tons of military equipment for which U.S. prisoners have provided essential components are exported to bomb, blast, and terrorize their ultimate recipients.

For me, being a revolutionary is the best way to live. Capture and imprisonment involve adjustments, but have not made me repentant for a life time of anti-imperialism and struggle for justice. I was sent to Marion because of my political beliefs and associations and will likely remain here unless I repudiate them, which I will not do. For me to engage in the production of military equipment as a condition for transfer would be a repudiation of my political beliefs and principles. I will not do it.

Refusing to be an accomplice to U.S. militarism is an act rooted deep in conscience and solidarity with those fighting U.S. imperialism, and trying to survive its onslaught. It is largely a symbolic act, yet necessary in confronting the collaborative nature of the system.

It is not a decision made without consequences. The government and Bureau of Prison's iron fist gives no quarter to revolutionaries, rebels, and dissenters. It's part of Marion's mission to destroy an individual's identity and community ties. One my opinion address several major problems with the present status quo which leaves tens of millions of Americans without adequate health care coverage. It does however constitute a major power grab by the medical establishment away from community-based and alternative forms of health care. It does considerably increase the power of the state to regulate and control our lives. It does not look at the role of large corporate industrial and "post-industrial" capitalism in necessitating unhealthy "lifestyles" for most of America's workers and unemployed. It does not significantly get to the roots of homelessness and poverty, to the social inequities of opportunity and living conditions that are a significant source of illness in our society.

Within the Clinton health care plan there is a move to defund cost-effective community-based health clinics like the Berkeley Free Clinic and many others, and to shift funding yet more to large impersonal medical establishments like HMOs. There is a major move in Alameda County, starting this month and with no time for general public debate, to shift the poor on Medicare and Medical to the "managed care" of large health maintenance organizations (HMOs) which operate under an alliance of insurance companies and large hospitals. This would be a move away from some degree of personal choice the poor would have in their own care. Since the health care for the poor, the indigent, "them" who are not white, privileged, sexually straight and male, will thus be considered to be dealt with. Community-based, community-controlled, community aware health clinics will thus be considered expendable. This is hardly cost-effective and will increase the level of alienation many less-than-privileged people will feel about the health care they are receiving and not receiving.

The federal "block grants" funding plan to the states removes previous stipulations that address the health needs of special communities. The Clinton health care "reform" in the state of California thus brings some bad news to the less affluent who might not like the choice of mandated mainstream medical care or nothing. The "block grants" funding plan is being pushed by the newly appointed Surgeon General, Jocelyn Elders, friend of Hillary. She is a token black appointee pushing a plan not friendly to the black or other minority/disempowered communities. Consider please

the recent anti-immigrant racist hysteria

Consider what it means to clinics like the Berkeley Free Clinic that have philosophies of medicine which run contrary to that of the medical establishment. Consider what it means for the future of feminist clinics. Consider what it means to local gay or bisexual men if instead of the Gay Men's Health Collective they had to go for treatment and confidentiality to some straight HMO doctor who doesn't have any real feeling or connection to their concerns. Remember that the Governor who vetoed gay partners legislation would have some major say in what kind of health care gay men and women would receive.

Consider what it means if you are an American Indian or a Chinese person with an alternative cultural approach to medicine than that sanctioned by the American Medical Association (A.M.A.). Consider what it will mean to you if you prefer herbal and other non-Federal Drug Administration (F.D.A.) approaches to healing, alternatives to the use of antibiotics and the overuse of physically and psychologically invasive surgeries. Consider, readers of Slingshot, what managed care will mean to your right to choose the kind of medical care that you want rather than what you are forced to accept with your freshly issued U. S. Health Security. And you illegal self-medicators...

As a member of the Berkeley Free Clinic's Peer Counseling Collective I consider the mental care health care provisions of the Hillary & Ira plan to be grossly insufficient. Even what is in there is considered unlikely to get past the U. S. Congress.

Instead of badly needed funding for critically needed, enlightened halfway programs to replace mental institutionalization or life in the streets, there is funding for 30 days in an institution and then it is back on the streets for those psychologically unable to tend to their basic survival needs. There is funding for a certain specified number of therapy sessions with a mainstream professional approved by your HMO. There is no questioning of established psychiatric establishment practice with their heavy use of spirit-deadening drugs ("anti-psychotic") by Tipper Gore, Hillary's advisor on mental health. Beware you Twisted Sister fans: a cozy padded cell may be waiting for you.

The present status quo in my opinion is much worse than care by a witch doctor. It desperately calls for revolutionary overthrow. In the early days of the Berkeley Free Clinic we

the end product.

It is the priority of UNICOR to provide for the military's needs, whether it was during the Korean War when 80% of UNICOR sales went to the military, or the Gulf War when prisoners were pressed into overtime. In fact, the military has its own representative on UNICOR's Board of Directors to advise on how to better harness prison labor for military purposes.

Being contracted to the War Department means supplying more than just U.S. forces. It means that this military equipment is rerouted by the U.S. to its client states--from Israel to Indonesia--and into the hands of the world's most degenerate and bloodthirsty regimes. In cases like El Salvador, the supplies were used to kill their own people. UNICOR's military production is part of an extensive pipeline that feeds the world's largest weapon exporter.

USP-Marion is a Control Unit prison where abuse of prisoners is well documented by Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, Congressional committee hearings, and other sources. In the never ending lockdown there is little to engage the intellect, an abysmal lack of stimulation and recreation, and no work with which to labor. With one exception. The prison administration has designed a scheme whereby prisoners deemed suitable must enter a period of involuntary servitude in the "pre-their ultimate recipients. For me, being a revolutionary is the best way to live. Capture and imprisonment involve adjustments, but have not made me repentant for a life time of anti-imperialism and struggle for justice. I was sent to Marion because of my political beliefs and associations and will likely remain here unless I repudiate them, which I will not do. For me to engage in the production of military equipment as a condition for transfer would be a repudiation of my political beliefs and principles. I will not do it.

Refusing to be an accomplice to U.S. militarism is an act rooted deep in conscience and solidarity with those fighting U.S. imperialism, and trying to survive its onslaught. It is largely a symbolic act, yet necessary in confronting the collaborative nature of the system.

It is not a decision made without consequences. The government and Bureau of Prison's iron fist gives no quarter to revolutionaries, rebels, and dissenters. It's part of Marion's mission to destroy an individual's identity and community ties. One warden stated that, "The purpose of Marion is to control revolutionary attitudes in the prison system and society at large." Rather overstated from a bureaucratic windbag, but the fact remains that Marion is repression personified in a social experiment. Any outward indication that a prisoner does not conform to Marion's dictates and he is condemned to incessant isolation. For the transgressor there will be no relief--no step closer to personal freedom; no embrace of family and loved ones; no access to expanded work, education, or recreational opportunities; no shot at parole. Added to the burden is the public's indifference and the response of the liberal left, who view prisoners with contempt and political prisoners with hostility.

Yet, through all the years and for all its evil ways, Marion has not destroyed me. All that can destroy me are guards, medical neglect, or a prisoner that doesn't have his head screwed on right. There's an axiom here which alliance of insurance companies and large hospitals. This would be a move away from some degree of personal choice the poor would have in their own care. Since the health care for the poor, the indigent, "them" who are not white, privileged, sexually straight and male, will thus be considered to be dealt with. Community-based, community-controlled, community aware health clinics will thus be considered expendable. This is hardly cost-effective and will increase the level of alienation many less-than-privileged people will feel about the health care they are receiving and not receiving.

continued on page 7

The federal "block grants" funding plan to the states removes previous stipulations that address the health needs of special communities. The Clinton health care "reform" in the state of California thus brings some bad news to the less affluent who might not like the choice of mandated mainstream medical care or nothing. The "block grants" funding plan is being pushed by the newly appointed Surgeon

General, Jocelyn Elders, friend of Hillary. She is a token black appointee pushing a plan not friendly to the black or other minority/disempowered communities. Consider please the recent anti-immigrant racist hysteria against basic health care for pregnant and illegal migrant mothers by Governor Pete Wilson which was the aped by Senator Dianne Feinstein. Consider what it would mean for the Chicano and other Hispanic communities if a community-based clinic like Clinica de la Raza had to close due to defunding. Or if they were forced to closely screen their clients to appease the demagoguery of would be fascists. Yuppies might consider that the gutting of the Farm Labor Board by the previous Republican governor has lead to poor sanitary conditions for the migrant workers who issued U. S. Health Security. And you illegal self-medicators...

As a member of the Berkeley Free Clinic's Peer Counseling Collective I consider the mental care health care provisions of the Hillary & Ira plan to be grossly insufficient. Even what is in there is considered unlikely to get past the U. S. Congress.

Instead of badly needed funding for critically needed, enlightened halfway programs to replace mental institutionalization or life in the streets, there is funding for 30 days in an institution and then it is back on the streets for those psychologically unable to tend to their basic survival needs. There is funding for a certain specified number of therapy sessions with a mainstream professional approved by your HMO. There is no questioning of established psychiatric establishment practice with their heavy use of spirit-deadening drugs ("anti-psychotic") by Tipper Gore, Hillary's advisor on mental health. Beware you Twisted Sister fans: a cozy padded cell may be waiting for you.

The present status quo in my opinion is much worse than care by a witch doctor. It desperately calls for revolutionary overthrow. In the early days of the Berkeley Free Clinic we were home to Radical Psychology where the prevalent model of adjusting the "patient" to a schizogenic society was rejected. Instead there was a stress on revolutionary self-empowerment to say no to the alienation of mainstream consumerist capitalist society. Tipper Gore you may get backstage passes to Grateful Dead concerts but you and the Clinton Administration just don't get it.

And if you are broke and need dental care wait until 2000 A.D. before you can get any care under the Clinton health care plan.

-Michael Diehl

Organic Underground Radicals:

Squash the State/ Gardening in Santa Cruz

By Anders Corr

After a granola feast and a gift of snapdragons on Mother's Day, my Mom and I went to the plot of land across from Stapleton's Healthfood store to join an extra-legal gardening party. A group of about thirty homeless people and activists, mostly from the Food Not Bombs community formed in the last year, planned the action two nights before. It was illegal because the California Department of Transportation owned the land and we had no permission to dig or plant. My mother and I were the first to arrive at 9:30 a.m. half an hour after the planned start. We waited on a bale of hay next to a magnificent pile of composted shit.

Around ten o'clock a bunch of folks showed up and kept arriving until about two dozen of us were digging with pitchforks, shovels, clearing grass with our hands and running the noisy gas-powered rototiller. The rototiller was hitting rocks, so we had to dig them all out. It took six people to carry one giant slab of concrete.

Once the ground was broken we scattered manure, laboriously double dug four beds, planted, watered, and spread straw to retain the precious moisture. I did more gardening that day then I have done in my entire life. Suddenly gardening becomes more interesting when there might be cops against it.

All kinds of people worked: the majority were homeless or students, but there were a few others. David, a Latin American history professor at UCSC dropped off some tiny basil and corn plants but said he could not dig because he sprained his back while weeding his own garden the previous day. Sandy helped with the digging and brought a bunch of water in one gallon jugs. Single mom and Quaker Dawn arrived without her kids (they were tired), and everyone's favorite anarchist lawyer (recently debarred) used his arms instead of his mouth for once. Santa Cruz City Councilmember Scott Kennedy said hello early in the day but he never offered him a pick, joking that his role was to supply the police.

Some suggested naming the garden after Hakim Bey's Temporary Autonomous Zone. One garden in the city park at the end of Trescony is named the 'anarchist plot.' Mother's Garden,

Freedom Garden, People's Park South, and First Amendment Park were proposed as names for our most recent piece of liberated land. I was reminded of the Manna-Pesto of the Revolutionary Garden Party (Organarchist Vangardeners) which makes a case for banning zukes and squashing the state. People are now calling it "O.U.R. (Organic Underground Radicals) Garden."

While double digging next to one of my closest anarchist friends, he said he was glad that this woman digging behind us, Hé-sista, had come because she was so beautiful. She later came over to dig with us and said, "What else is there to do?" He said, "You have so much energy, what else can we find for you to do?"

"It sounds like you're talking to a little girl, it's condescending and I don't appreciate it," she yelled at him and chased a bad at the other end of the garden on which to work. She later confronted another anarchist gardener for racism, to which he replied, "I am not racist." She mimed him sarcastically, "I am not racist, I love people of color, I try to help them."

My buddy told me later that he was

"attempting to be friendly" and the second guy said that he did not "feel that people are inherently racist. The left is confused in terms of the race issue."

"I knew when I got to the garden," Hé-sista told me, "that the way I appeared did not look like I belonged digging gardens. I go through life feeling objectified. Hollywood portrays Asian women as the seductress, the whore, the penultimate of her satisfaction being to suck white cock and bring white men their tea and slippers. I was taught that since I first stepped onto this continent. I am told that my only role in life is to capture a white man."

"In Korea while there was an American presence, only white, blond, blue-eyed men, preferably with a suit, tie and briefcase are supreme, beautiful, intelligent and successful. The Asian woman, I am told, does not discriminate as to personality. A white man, any white man, no matter how disgusting, is what she is after. Sometimes I find myself unconsciously slipping into that role. White men talk to me everyday as a hussy and I feel like I have to prove myself, which is exhausting when you have to do it all the time."

"As far as racism goes, everyone is racist. I am an Asian lesbian woman without a lot of money and I am sexist, racist, classist and homophobic. Because I grew up in this country, because of the constant reinforcements, all of it seems to live in my psyche like an unwanted herd of termites in a house. When I see a black person or homeless person, all these thoughts go through my head."

"Any white person who denies they are racist exhibits the worst kind of racism. The

continued on page 12

THE NEW HEALTH ORDER...

The FDA is proposing the solution to the upswing in self healing that has come about because of americans' diminishing faith and access to traditional (ha!) western medicine. Their solution is to make it illegal. The FDA was hitting rocks, so we had to dig them all out. It took six people to carry one giant slab of concrete.

Once the ground was broken we scattered manure, laboriously double dug four beds, planted, watered, and spread straw to retain the precious moisture. I did more gardening that day then I have done in my entire life. Suddenly gardening becomes more interesting when there might be cops against it.

All kinds of people worked: the majority were homeless or students, but there were a few others. David, a Latin American history professor at UCSC dropped off some tiny basil and corn plants but said he could not dig because he sprained his back while weeding his own garden the previous day. Sandy helped with the digging and brought a bunch of water in one gallon jugs. Single mom and Quaker Dawn arrived without her kids (they were tired), and everyone's favorite anarchist lawyer (recently debarred) used his arms instead of his mouth for once. Santa Cruz City Councilmember Scott Kennedy said hello early in the day, but begged off when I offered him a

Freedom Garden, People's Park South, and First Amendment Park were proposed as names for our most recent piece of liberated land. I was reminded of the Manna-Pesto of the Revolutionary Garden Party (Organarchist Vangardeners) which makes a case for banning zukes and squashing the state. People are now calling it "O.U.R. (Organic Underground Radicals) Garden."

While double digging next to one of my closest anarchist friends, he said he was glad that this woman digging behind us, Hé-sista, had come because she was so beautiful. She later came over to dig with us and said, "What else is there to do?" He said, "You have so much energy, what else can we find for you to do?"

"It sounds like you're talking to a little girl, it's condescending and I don't appreciate it," she yelled at him and chose a bed at the other

"attempting to be friendly" and the second guy said that he did not "feel that people are inherently racist. The left is confused in terms of the race issue."

"I knew when I got to the garden," Hé-sista told me, "that the way I appeared did not look am an Asian lesbian woman without a lot of money and I am sexist, racist, classist and homophobic. Because I grew up in this country, because of the constant reinforcements, all of it seems to live in my psyche like an unwanted herd of termites in a house. When I see a black person or homeless person, all these thoughts go through my head."

"Any white person who denies they are racist exhibits the worst kind of racism. The

continued on page 12

THE NEW HEALTH ORDER...

The FDA is proposing the solution to the upswing in self healing that has come about because of americans' diminishing faith and access to traditional (ha!) western medicine. Their solution is to make it illegal. The FDA wants to classify herbs, vitamins, amino acids and other supplements that have "health claims", as "drugs". Then they demand that drugs need to be tested ("scientifically" of course) and used only with a doctors prescription. But since herbs can't be patented and doctors aren't trained in herbal healing, it would greatly limit our access to alternative and natural health remedies. It's a move that would put health stores out of business and railroad health care into a monopoly for pharmaceutical companies and the AMA and a paradigm for healing that treats bodies as machines to be handed over to the "experts".

The freedom to care for our bodies, as we will, is critical. This is the same struggle as the Inquisition when the power of the Church brutally took healing from the common wise woman who used aged traditions and plant wisdom, and placed medicine in the domain of men, the church, and the wealthy class. Health became a commodity.

Many people use natural herbs as a health alternative to the alien modern medicine. Herbs teach and heal us in ways that "science" cannot completely comprehend. It is critical that we maintain a right to heal ourselves in traditional methods that see the body and spirit as a part of broad ecosystem that needs to be sustained for our species' health.

I see the move by the FDA as a part of a trend to control and subvert nature that combined with bio-technology, modern agriculture, cultural obsession with sterility and wholesale destruction of ecosystems that is leading us to a very tenuous future. In the name of the wild, freedom, diversity and life we must divert this scheme of death for profit.

The FDA's proposed regulations could go into effect Dec. 15, 1993. Two similar regulations, passed recently in Norway and Sweden, have radically changed Sweden's good climate for alternative medicine and have made a $5 bottle of vitamins cost $45 in Norway.

BACK ON THE STREETS AGAIN?

Everyone wonders--and talks about--why it's so hard to meet people. Doesn't it seem odd, yet logical, that you can walk around all customer's knees accidentally but continually bumping under a cafe table. Our eyes and bodies are communicating, "I already know you

BACK ON THE STREETS AGAIN?

Everyone wonders--and talks about--why it's so hard to meet people. Doesn't it seem odd, yet logical, that you can walk around all day through our crowded cities without getting into a conversation (unless it's with someone who's trying to sell you something)? Downtown and in the suburbs, inside the retail zones and around the residential neighborhoods, the human atoms stream by each other in horny, brutalized isolation. No wonder the search to make contact with the right person is so intense and is such a large part of our lives.

You go to a party, bar, cafe, or wherever you take yourself these days. And there you see more desperate faces--as desperate as yours--behind the alcohol and caffeinated facade. You either join in with the usual compulsive smiling, dull friendliness, and conventional conversations, or you leave fast. How can you find someone you can talk to--someone like you--in an alienated aquarium like this?

Yet there are those rare moments: the long-held glance of recognition between two strangers across a room at a party, or two customer's knees accidentally but continually bumping under a cafe table. Our eyes and bodies are communicating, "I already know you because you are alone here like me."

Who Are These People?

"Alone," of course, is the wildest irony of all. Aren't we surrounded with people all day long--at work, out shopping, in the neighborhood, and out at night? Yes, but we're not with these people because we choose to be with them. At work we have to be there to sell our time for money, along with the other employees. In the store, generally all we have in common with the others is that we're buying the same stuff. In the apartment building or in the neighborhood--well, we have to live somewhere, and our income determines where and with whom. In the movies, bar, or the club, we're there for entertainment, and the others more often than not are just our fellow-spectators and fellow-consumers.

Brother Can You Spare a Studio?

Finding a partner isn't easy, but it's harder
continued on page 12

drugs need to be tested ("scientifically" of course) and used only with a doctor's prescription. But since herbs can't be patented and doctors aren't trained in herbal healing, it would greatly limit our access to alternative and natural health remedies. It's a move that would put health stores out of business and railroad health care into a monopoly for pharmaceutical companies and the AMA and a paradigm for healing that treats bodies as machines to be handed over to the "experts".

The freedom to care for our bodies, as we will, is critical. This is the same struggle as the Inquisition when the power of the Church brutally took healing from the common wise woman who used aged traditions and plant wisdom, and placed medicine in the domain of men, the church, and the wealthy class. Health became a commodity.

Another major change in healing came with the synthesis of new substances in a laboratory. Most of the drugs prescribed by physicians today, came into being within the last forty years. They are substances new to our ecosystem, their "safety and efficacy" are determined by torturing animals, and they are produced and sold in packaged plastic for profit. The Public Citizen Health Research Group reports that an average of 9.6 million older adults suffer adverse reactions to these drugs each year in this country.

Many people use natural herbs as a health alternative to the alien modern medicine. Herbs teach and heal us in ways that "science" cannot completely comprehend. It is critical that we maintain a right to heal ourselves in traditional methods that see the body and spirit as a part of broad ecosystem that needs to be sustained for our species' health.

I see the move by the FDA as a part of a trend to control and subvert nature that combined with bio-technology, modern agriculture, cultural obsession with sterility and wholesale destruction of ecosystems that is leading us to a very tenuous future. In the name of the wild, freedom, diversity and life we must divert this scheme of death for profit.

The FDA's proposed regulations could go into effect Dec. 15, 1993. Two similar regulations, passed recently in Norway and Sweden, have radically changed Sweden's good climate for alternative medicine and have made a $5 bottle of vitamins cost $45 in Norway. Big business and the pharmaceutical companies wanted profits from people's growing faith in alternative healing methods.

Don't believe that the FDA is acting in the interests of protecting the American people. If the FDA were really so concerned about your health that they would take from the shelves vitamin C so you can't overdose yourself; you'd think they'd also consider testing and labeling of bio-genetically engineered foods. But no, they're willing to release these products with totally unpredictable consequences on the American public as a huge guinea pig testing ground that might very well make a large market of future "health consumers".

Choice in health care is critical to freedom. If you still believe in the US political process there is a bill (SB 784 and HR 1709) in congress that would guarantee public access to herbs, vitamins, supplements and information about them. Write your reps and give 'em an earfull.

Pornography is Not Harmless

By Ms. Tommy Lawless

"Pornography is simply a depiction of people having sex."

"Violence Against Wimmin' only refers to rare S&M and B&D scenes."

"Anyone who's against porn is a 'fun-phobe nun.'"

"Porn is not harmful to wimmin'."

These are some of the disturbing arguments that have been bouncing around the anarchist press these past few years, and they are simply not true.

The popular conception of "violence against wimmin" in porn is too shallow. This violence is not only manifest as wimmin cut, bruised and bleeding portrayed as objects of desire (which is a small minority of material in the sex industry). This violence is also manifest in the subtle ways we are programmed to treat wimmin as less than human, as non-people. The "non-personhood of wimmin" is daily reinforced in a many of ways; porn is only the most obvious way.

For this article, I define "porn" as sex-industry material. In most porn the camera frame (or stage) represents "the male gaze," assumes that the viewer and desire is male. For this gaze, wimmin's bodies, body parts, spirits, desires and will are offered up on a glossy platter as pliant, available, completely subjugated to the wants of the viewer. This subjugation is only reflects the way we are all seems to be the norm for (too) many wimmin. This is real life.

Some bemoan that porn debate has resurfaced in the @ community at all. They ask, isn't this redundant after FACT (Feminist Anti-Censorship Taskforce) shouted down the Dworkin-MacKinnon forces years ago? Actually, the porn debate has been raging on in the feminist community non-stop from the birth of the movement through today, and it has been the single most divisive issue among us.

While I do not support Dworkin's censorship stance, I believe she fills the important role of reminding us of the uglies underlying our patriarchal culture. "What do you call a womyn with a Ph.D?" she quips. "Cunt!" Because any womyn can walk down the street anywhere in the world and be called one. Because any womyn can and will be viewed as a reduction of her body parts, as a hole to be filled, as the rightful domain of men, as a non-person.

Perhaps the last time men in North America were objectified daily was during the slave trade. African and Asian people were physically examined and humiliated, judged for their strength and the condition of their teeth. (Of course, wimmin were included in this degradation too.) Men here do not experience objectification in these brutal, dehumanizing

SOME GUYS TRY TO PICK UP GIRLS. THEY GET CALLED AN ASSHOLE. THIS DID NOT HAPPEN TO PABLO PICASSO. DROVE DOWN THE ROAD IN HIS E1 DORADO, GIRLS WOULD TURN THE COLOR OF AN AVACADO.

VOYEURS AND

Exhibitionists

Sexuality and sensuality in Western culture has always been represented by nude women. Go through any porno shop, art museum, or magazine. Men are supposed to get off by being voyeuristic, and women by bring checked out. This standard permeates our society through all levels; even in the alternative/radical community. In Asian, African and Indian cultures, the genre of the nude does not exist. Erotica is depicted by two people in the midst of sensual or sexual contact, absorbed in only each other. In Western culture, erotica is usually depicted by one nude woman alone; or many nude women together, all more interested in the viewer than each other. I've found when I've expressed my annoyance of these roles, many radical women have scoffed at me as if I were some old prude. I've often been told that doing sex industry work is empowering for women,

PABLO PICASSO WAS NEVER CALLED A

S&M and B&D scenes." "Anyone who's against porn is a 'fun-phobe nun.'"

"Porn is not harmful to wimmin."

These are some of the disturbing arguments that have been bouncing around the anarchist press these past few years, and they are simply not true.

The popular conception of "violence against wimmin" in porn is too shallow. This violence is not only manifest as wimmin cut, bruised and bleeding portrayed as objects of desire (which is a small minority of material in the sex industry). This violence is also manifest in the subtle ways we are programmed to treat wimmin as less than human, as non-people. The "non-personhood of wimmin" is daily reinforced in a many of ways; porn is only the most obvious way.

For this article, I define "porn" as sex-industry material. In most porn the camera frame (or stage) represents "the male gaze," assumes that the viewer and desire is male. For this gaze, wimmin's bodies, body parts, spirits, desires and will are offered up on a glossy platter as pliant, available, completely subjugated to the wants of the viewer. This subjugation is only reflects the way we are all socialized to think about wimmin: wimmin's bodies, minds, and spirits are the rightful domain of men. We are non-persons, non-subjects.

What happens porn scenarios? The eye focuses on female body parts: an upturned ass, upthrust breasts, spread thighs, facial expressions of ecstasy telling the viewer, "I'm all yours; take me. You can do whatever you want to me. What you want, I want." In hetero porn, men and men's bodies are almost never portrayed in this way. (I'll talk about male gay porn later.) Male bodies are shown in action: male hands, penis, mouth acting upon the pliant, willing female body. Or if a womyn is shown in action, she is always revved up and programmed to do exactly as the viewer desires. If she says, "no," she doesn't mean it.

How does it feel for a womyn to be treated as a non-person in everyday life? I can speak from my own experience. There are porn strips all over downtown San Francisco where I live. Every time I brave walking past these strips, day or night, I am harassed, propositioned, grabbed and in general terrorized in extremely unpleasant ways. The male reaction to my saying, "no," to my self-defense is always first surprise, then embitterment, followed by

Some bemoan that porn debate has resurfaced in the @ community at all. They ask, isn't this redundant after FACT (Feminist Anti-Censorship Taskforce) shouted down the Dworkin-MacKinnon forces years ago? Actually, the porn debate has been raging on in the feminist community non-stop from the birth of the movement through today, and it has been the single most divisive issue among us.

While I do not support Dworkin's censorship stance, I believe she fills the important role of reminding us of the uglies underlying our patriarchal culture. "What do you call a womyn with a Ph.D?" she quips. "Cunt!" Because any womyn can walk down the street anywhere in the world and be called one. Because any womyn can and will be viewed as a reduction of her body parts, as a hole to be filled, as the rightful domain of men, as a non-person.

Perhaps the last time men in North America were objectified daily was during the slave trade. African and Asian people were physically examined and humiliated, judged for their strength and the condition of their teeth. (Of course, wimmin were included in this degradation too.) Men here do not experience objectification in these brutal, dehumanizing ways anymore. And thus, when male bodies are fetishized (as in male gay porn) the cultural meaning is not the same as it is when wimmin's bodies are. Being reduced to a phallus does not equal being reduced to a hole. A phallus is power-full; a hole is power-less. Objectifying male bodies through porn will not turn the tables on patriarchy.

What conclusions am I drawing here? Do I want to ban all porn, burn down sex shops and reeducate sex industry workers? NO! Do I think porn, in its cultural context, is harmful to wimmin? YES. As are advertising, popular songs, television shows, films, books, zines and newspapers. Would I like to see all of the above eradicated from society? Of course not. (Well, maybe advertising.) I would like to see it all drastically changed.

Many feminists who identify as "pro-sex" want to reclaim the sexual arena to empower wimmin. Some are creating "new porn," attempting to assert their own personhood, will and desires. Many sex performers (Annie Sprinkle among them) and lesbian porn in general are making leaps and bounds in this direction. Female performance artists are active in this work as well.

THIS IS REAL LIFE. SOME GUYS TRY TO PICK UP GIRLS, THEY GET CALLED DORADO, GIRLS WOULD TURN THE COLOR OF A DORADO, WHEN HE DROVE DOWN THE ROAD IN HIS EYEGLASSES.

checked out. This standard permeates our society through all levels; even in the alternative/radical community. In Asian, African and Indian cultures, the genre of the nude does not exist. Erotica is depicted by two people in the midst of sensual or sexual contact, absorbed in only each other. In Western culture, erotica is usually depicted by one nude woman alone; or many nude women together, all more interested in the viewer than each other. I've found when I've expressed my annoyance of these roles, many radical women have scoffed at me as if I were some old prude. I've often been told that doing sex industry work is empowering for women, getting control of our sexuality and all that. I've done sex industry work and the only way it empowered me was by giving me cash! Why is it that being a "good" sensual woman means getting use to this role and not complaining? Even the women's sex shop Good Vibrations sends that message out. Look through their books, their photos on the walls, their porno videos--the vast majority of them focus only on women's bodies. This is a store whose poll taken earlier this year stated 70% of their customers are straight women.

PABLO PICASSO WAS NEVER CALLED AN ASSHOLE.

Years ago, I took a figure drawing class at Berkeley where I was forced to play the male voyeur role and use the female nude in my paintings. The professor only hired women with a typically "attractive" body. He told us that the model was not important, that we were to use her in our paintings as part of expressing our medium (acrylic paint). After only the first session, a guy came up to the professor and said, "Isn't it great--my parents are paying for this!" And the professor laughed and said, "that's great!"

Week after week it was the same body type. I tried to get out of the boredom by painting the individual woman's faces. When I started doing that, the paint brush was taken out of my hand--literally-- and he would say, "We are not doing portraits here, we are using the figure as an object in our paintings--individual models are not important" Tits and a cunt. He especially liked it when their faces were not even drawn.

Why do we as women put up with the some old shit? Why do we so often equate empowerment and sensuality with others perceptions of our bodies? Why do men get whole sections of cities devoted to serving their dicks; while we do the serving? Let's get over this shit and realize the traditional roles that this society projects on us are not the only one's possible. We domain of men. We are non-persons, non-subjects.

What happens porn scenarios? The eye focuses on female body parts: an upturned ass, upthrust breasts, spread thighs, facial expressions of ecstasy telling the viewer, "I'm all yours; take me. You can do whatever you want to me. What you want, I want." In hetero porn, men and men's bodies are almost never portrayed in this way. (I'll talk about male gay porn later.) Male bodies are shown in action: male hands, penis, mouth acting upon the pliant, willing female body. Or if a womyn is shown in action, she is always revved up and programmed to do exactly as the viewer desires. If she says, "no," she doesn't mean it.

How does it feel for a womyn to be treated as a non-person in everyday life? I can speak from my own experience. There are porn strips all over downtown San Francisco where I live. Every time I brave walking past these strips, day or night, I am harassed, propositioned, grabbed and in general terrorized in extremely unpleasant ways. The male reaction to my saying, "no," to my self-defense is always first surprise, then embitterment, followed by degrading words and actions. (I've had similar experiences in cities all over the world.) The male assumption is obvious to me: I am a commodity to be consumed. I am denying these men what they believe is their right--my body (and will and desire).

I do not believe a man in this patriarchal world can experience this objectification as wimmin do. Men, have you ever had a womyn in authority over you stare continuously at your crotch (instead of your eyes) and slyly try to grab your ass while you were trying to speak about something very important to you? Your grade, your salary, your proposal for a political event? And if so, has this happened more than once? Is this a normal event in your life? I think not.

Some men have asserted that anti-porn wimmin just need to relax a little and have some fun. A letter in Love and Rage Vol 3 No 4 concludes with, "Yahoos: Get loose and join the real world - you've got nothing to lose but your scowls!" Unfortunately in the "real world" wimmin do have a little more to lose. I have been violently punished for asserting my sexual desire. I have been raped several times. This meaning is not the same as it is when wimmin's bodies are. Being reduced to a phallus does not equal being reduced to a hole. A phallus is power-full; a hole is power-less. Objectifying male bodies through porn will not turn the tables on patriarchy.

What conclusions am I drawing here? Do I want to ban all porn, burn down sex shops and reeducate sex industry workers? NO! Do I think porn, in its cultural context, is harmful to wimmin? YES. As are advertising, popular songs, television shows, films, books, zines and newspapers. Would I like to see all of the above eradicated from society? Of course not. (Well, maybe advertising.) I would like to see it all drastically changed.

Many feminists who identify as "pro-sex" want to reclaim the sexual arena to empower wimmin. Some are creating "new porn," attempting to assert their own personhood, will and desires. Many sex performers (Annie Sprinkle among them) and lesbian porn in general are making leaps and bounds in this direction. Female performance artists are active in this work as well.

However, many feminists believe that effectively creating "new porn" cannot be done in patriarchal culture. I myself am doubtful; but I strongly believe we should try. Only time and the cultural response will tell.

I fully support sex-industry workers. But I also support wimmin who burn porn out of their desire to be free from violence. Being pro-sex is not the same as being pro-porn.

I know many men who try to honor the personhood of wimmin. But most men don't. The non-personhood of wimmin is deeply ingrained and daily reinforced in all of us. I'm asking everyone to acknowledge that and to recognize the diverse violence connected to porn images.

The foremost goal is to bring about a society where wimmin (and all persons) can be free to assert our sexual desires (homo and hetero) without fear or assault. As anti-authoritarians, I hope we are all working towards this freedom.

[This article originally appeared in Love and Rage Vol 3 No 7 as a letter, as part of an ongoing debate about pornography and anarchism.]

getting control of our sexuality and all that. I've done sex industry work and the only way it empowered me was by giving me cash! Why is it that being a "good" sensual woman means getting use to this role and not complaining? Even the women's sex shop Good Vibrations sends that message out. Look through their books, their photos on the walls, their porno videos--the vast majority of them focus only on women's bodies. This is a store whose poll taken earlier this year stated 70% of their customers are straight women.

Years ago, I took a figure drawing class at Berkeley where I was forced to play the male voyeur role and use the female nude in my paintings. The professor only hired women with a typically "attractive" body. He told us that the model was not important, that we were to use her in our paintings as part of expressing our medium (acrylic paint). After only the first session, a guy came up to the professor and said, "Isn't it great--my parents are paying for this!" And the professor laughed and said, "that's great!"

Week after week it was the same body type. I tried to get out of the boredom by painting the individual woman's faces. When I started doing that, the paint brush was taken out of my hand--literally-- and he would say, "We are not doing portraits here, we are using the figure as an object in our paintings--individual models are not important" Tits and a cunt. He especially liked it when their faces were not even drawn.

Why do we as women put up with the some old shit? Why do we so often equate empowerment and sensuality with others perceptions of out bodies? Why do men get whole sections of cities devoted to serving their dicks; while we do the serving? Let's get over this shit and realize the traditional roles that this society projects on us are not the only one's possible. We don't have to remain passive, being checked out by other women and men. We could do some lookin' too!

love,
Zora

MONOGAMY AND THE MYTH OF SLUTDOOM

by Klin Lapisardi

When I used to live in San Francisco, I worked for a few months as a topless dancer. I experienced a lot, both good and bad, but I think the most positive and most profound was how it opened up my sexuality. When I was dancing on stage, I would constantly try to find creative means of diversifying my performance. This required that I search my own mind for what I found appealing. I also felt that I needed to prove a point, that one can express themselves sexually without being a "slut" or a "tramp". One of the means of controlling women has traditionally been the virgin/whore complex. Under this notion, good girls are pure and purity equals being non-sexual. If you enjoy sex, you're a "bad girl", a girl no self-respecting man would love. It teaches women to be ashamed of their bodies, to never initiate sexually and to be tied to her male lover. They condemn sex workers as, at worst, "selling out to the patriarchy" and at best being naive victims, too stupid or too conditioned to understand their "exploitation".

Another thing that dancing did was help me understand my bisexuality. I have tangled immensely with the "which side of the fence are you on?" mindset. I do not consider sexuality to be a fence or a line or anything but who you love and/or desire. There is, again, the stigma of slutdom on bisexuals. The assumption that bisexuals can't be monogamous has led me to be monogamous to refute that, even when it may not have been the best situation for me. Now, I'm romantic in spite of myself and part of me finds a lasting love affair fairly appealing. Still, I'm at the point in my life where I take no stand on monogamy. It can be a very empowering thing for women to assert non-monogamy. There are many arguments for and against monogamy, both of which seem based on an ideal that seldom works out that way. It makes more sense than rather take an official stand on it, to judge on a case by case basis. Our lives aren't neatly fixed or predictable; what we want will vary as will the form of the that for sex to have any emotions involved it must be monogamous. I see no reason why friends can't be sexual with each other without it changing their relationship. It ought to deepen, but not necessarily restructure their interactions. If a couple decides that they only want to be intimate with each other that's great, but should one or both have other lovers, it need not cheapen what they share. The key factor here is honesty. A lot of vulnerable emotions can arise when sex is involved and it is crucial that there be no manipulations or dishonesty in the interactions.

For me, physical and emotional attraction are extremely blurred, intertwined, forming a web of feelings and desire. I see sexual friendships as an ideal. While I wouldn't want to be sexual with all my friends, there are going to be certain ones with whom being sexual is the deepest expression of affection between us.

In short, the most liberating thing that women can do for themselves is to each look within and find what they truly want and proceed from there.

Exotic Dancer's Alliance

By looking exhaustively into the negative and demonic potentials of the unconscious, and recognizing these powers--symbolically acting them out--one releases oneself from these forces. By this profound exorcism and ritual drama, the great subculture destroys the one credible claim of church and state to a necessary function.

NUDISM RISING

The veils of clothing separating being from reality are struggling to be removed. A new anti-nudity law and several misdemeanor arrests do not stop Andrew Martinez, "the naked guy" of Berkeley, from openly challenging the age old taboo. Likewise the Explicit Players performed "skyclad" on the U.C. campus after their permit at an indoor venue was yanked by chancellor Tien. Charges ensued, but were then dropped-- attorney Bill "the Barrister" Simpich defending the Explicit act as free speech.

The Tucson Five, arrested for walking naked in the streets of Tucson at 1 am, had charges of "indecent exposure" and "being in a park after dark" changed to "criminal trespass"--with 6 months probation and moderate fines. (It's a sex offense to walk naked in Arizona - you have to register as a sex conditioned to understand their exploitation. Another thing that dancing did was help me understand my bisexuality. I have tangled immensely with the "which side of the fence are you on?" mindset. I do not consider sexuality to be a fence or a line or anything but who you love and/or desire. There is, again, the stigma of slutdom on bisexuals. The assumption that bisexuals can't be monogamous has led me to be monogamous to refute that, even when it may not have been the best situation for me. Now, I'm romantic in spite of myself and part of me finds a lasting love affair fairly appealing. Still, I'm at the point in my life where I take no stand on monogamy. It can be a very empowering thing for women to assert non-monogamy. There are many arguments for and against monogamy, both of which seem based on an ideal that seldom works out that way. It makes more sense than rather take an official stand on it, to judge on a case by case basis. Our lives aren't neatly fixed or predictable; what we want will vary as will the form of the relationships we become involved with.

Woody Allen once said, "Sex without love is an empty experience... but as far as empty experiences go, it's one of the best." How true, how true. However, I for one don't care for casual sex. Another myth that exists is

In short, the most liberating thing that women can do for themselves is to each look within and find what they truly want and proceed from there.

Exotic Dancer's Alliance

The Exotic Dancer's Alliance is a collective of dancers working together to obtain dancers' rights and to better their working conditions. For years, dancers have been regarded as second class citizens and have been taken advantage of. Individual dancers have complained from time to time and have been either fired or blacklisted. By organizing and working together, we will have a stronger voice of our own. We will be able to be heard and we will be able to gain our rights and our protections under the law.

At the present time, there are several important issues to be addressed. First is the issue of employment status. Under the guise of considering us as independent contractors, management has been charging us a $20 per shift stage fee and has avoided paying us wages and providing us our legal benefits, such as Social Security. However, the conditions of our employment clearly fit the legal definition of dancers as employees. If an individual performs services under the "will and control" of the employer, that person is an employee. We are confident that if we pursue this question together, we will be judged as being employees and will be entitled to wages, benefits, and reimbursement of the illegally-collected stage fees.

Second, is the issue of worker's rights and harassment. We have been sent home from work and even fired at the whim of management for reasons that are personal, unreasonable, not relevant to our work, and not even explained to us. Many of us have to tip the shift managers in order even to be allowed to work. These actions are clearly illegal.

Third, is the issue of working conditions. We are denied clean facilities. We do not have change rooms separate from rest room facilities. We are crowded into spaces too small for our numbers.

All of these things should change. We have the power to make these changes if only we use it. If we stick together and pursue our legal rights, the future will be much brighter for us individually and as a group.

EXOTIC DANCERS ALLIANCE
1442 A Walnut St. Suite 187
Berkeley CA 94709

The veils of clothing separating being from reality are struggling to be removed. A new anti-nudity law and several misdemeanor arrests do not stop Andrew Martinez, "the naked guy" of Berkeley, from openly challenging the age old taboo. Likewise the Explicit Players performed "skyclad" on the U.C. campus after their permit at an indoor venue was yanked by chancellor Tien. Charges ensued, but were then dropped-- attorney Bill "the Barrister" Simpich defending the Explicit act as free speech.

The Tucson Five, arrested for walking naked in the streets of Tucson at 1 am, had charges of "indecent exposure" and "being in a park after dark" changed to "criminal trespass"--with 6 months probation and moderate fines. (It's a sex offense to walk naked in Arizona - you have to register as a sex fiend forever with an indecent exposure charge and it's a felony if seen by a child).

The wing nut posse were challenged at Needles, CA for topless Colorado River dunking. The sheriff said "what if a child saw you?" We said, "these breasts feed children; at what age do these breasts become obscene to a child?"

Activist attorney Gattone of Tucson is representing several women growing a case of discrimination against women for the national "shirt requirement". Where are the mud people when you need them?

Prison Work

continued from page 4

SEX ZINE SCENE

The following is an abbreviated list of nonmainstream/underground zines that focus on sexuality. (sent from EIDOS)

EIDOS Magazine, Sexual Freedom & Erotic Entertainment Tabloid for women, men & couples, PO Box 96 Boston MA 02137

Apaeros, Reader-written forum about sex, erotica, relationships, 960 SW Jefferson Ave. Corvallis, OR 97333

Libido, The Journal of Sex & Sensibility, PO Box 146721, Chicago IL 60614

Vagabond's House, An alternative lifestyle magazine filled with life, fantasies, and feelings for anyone over 18. 1505 Hall Ave., Corcoran, CA 93212

Frighten The Horses, A Document of Sexual Revolution 41 Sutter st. #1108 SE CA experiences go, it's one of the best." How true, how true. However, I for one don't care for casual sex. Another myth that exists is

SEX ZINE SCENE

The following is an abbreviated list of nonmainstream/underground zines that focus on sexuality. (sent from EIDOS)

EIDOS Magazine, Sexual Freedom & Erotic Entertainment Tabloid for women, men & couples, PO Box 96 Boston MA 02137

Apaeros, Reader-written forum about sex, erotica, relationships, 960 SW Jefferson Ave. Corvallis, OR 97333

Libido, The Journal of Sex & Sensibility, PO Box 146721, Chicago IL 60614

Vagabond's House, An alternative lifestyle magazine filled with life, fantasies, and feelings for anyone over 18. 1505 Hall Ave., Corcoran, CA 93212

Frighten The Horses, A Document of Sexual Revolution 41 Sutter st. #1108 SF, CA 94104

Brat Attack, The 'Zine For Leatherdykes and other Bad Girls, Box 40754, San Francisco, CA 94140

Taste of Latex,...it's a kink thing, PO Box 460122, SF CA 94146

On Our Backs, Entertainment for the adventurous Lesbian, 562 Castro St., SF, CA 94114

Bad Attitude, Lesbian Sex Magazine by women for women, POB 110 Cambridge MA 02139

dancers working together to obtain dancers' rights and to better their working conditions. For years, dancers have been regarded as second class citizens and have been taken advantage of. Individual dancers have complained from time to time and have been either fired or blacklisted. By organizing and working together, we will have a stronger voice of our own. We will be able to be heard and we will be able to gain our rights and our protections under the law.

At the present time, there are several important issues to be addressed. First is the issue of employment status. Under the guise of considering us as independent contractors, management has been charging us a $20 per shift stage fee and has avoided paying us wages and providing us our legal benefits, such as Social Security. However, the conditions of our employment clearly fit the legal definition of dancers as employees. If an individual performs services under the "will and control"

Chiron Rising, Entertainment for mature men and admirers, POB 2589, Victorville, CA 92393

Femina, The voice of feminine authority, PO Box 1873, Haverville MA 01831

Future Sex, The Future Sex Is Now!, 1095 Market St. #809, SF, CA 94103

Pump It Up! The magazine for Pumpers, 139 West 4th Ave, Roselle, NJ 07203

Black Lace, Black Lesbian Sexuality, POB 83912, LA, CA 90083

BLACKfire, Erotic Images & Experiences of Black Men, POB 83912, LA, CA 90083

Blue Blood, Real Life Tales of Vampirism, Bondage, Leather & Latex sex, 14207 Chesterfield Rd., Rockville, MD 20853

The Cherotic rEvolutionary, a zine about "the edge", PO Box 11445, Berkeley, CA 94701

question together, we will be judged as being employees and will be entitled to wages, benefits, and reimbursement of the illegally-collected stage fees.

Second, is the issue of worker's rights and harassment. We have been sent home from work and even fired at the whim of management for reasons that are personal, unreasonable, not relevant to our work, and not even explained to us. Many of us have to tip the shift managers in order even to be allowed to work. These actions are clearly illegal.

Third, is the issue of working conditions. We are denied clean facilities. We do not have change rooms separate from rest room facilities. We are crowded into spaces too small for our numbers.

All of these things should change. We have the power to make these changes if only we use it. If we stick together and pursue our legal rights, the future will be much brighter for us individually and as a group.

EXOTIC DANCERS ALLIANCE
1442 A Walnut St. Suite 187
Berkeley CA 94709

The wing hat posse were challenged at Needles, CA for topless Colorado River dunking. The sheriff said "what if a child saw you?" We said, "these breasts feed children; at what age do these breasts become obscene to a child?"

Activist attorney Gattone of Tucson is representing several women growing a case of discrimination against women for the national "shirt requirement". Where are the mud people when you need them?

Prison Work

continued from page 4

declares that all who enter these walls will eat much shit before leaving. It's inherent in Marion's mission. But eating shit is qualitatively different than producing war material that's used to put someone else in their grave. Someone else who also experiences a steady diet of oppression. Someone who does me no harm.

Viet Nam changed my view of liberation to mean a constant and protracted struggle against those forces that impose their will on others for power and profit. Freedom is the ultimate expression and condition of a people who control their own destiny. Once before, the government put me in uniform and used me for military purposes. Being young and naive was no excuse for my complicity. They'll not do it again.

August 1993.

Raymond Levasseur #10376-016
PO Box 1000
Marion, IL 62959

One Less Car!

Critical Mass Bike Ride

East Bay: Second Friday of the Month, meet at Berkeley BART, 5:30

Since the last issue of Slingshot, the Critical Mass bike ride has gone through quite a lot. For those not already familiar with the ride and what it is: the Critical Mass is a monthly group bike ride in which bicyclists meet and bike around town together in a big parade. It is a slow, social ride, not a race -- i.e. no macho stuff. No one is in charge, there is no formal organization. All decisions are made by "Xerocracy". Anyone with any ideas is free to make and circulate whatever flyers they wish to other cyclists and passers-by. The ride started a year ago in San Francisco, spread to Berkeley soon thereafter, and can now be found in New York City, Boston, Montreal, Portland, Sacramento, Santa Cruz, and even Poznan, Poland! Start your own ride!

All the rides have been growing. The San Francisco ride had over 700 participants last month for their 1st anniversary ride. In the East Bay, we drew well over 200 for the first time on our last ride.

On the July 9 East Bay ride, after we had already biked about 10 miles, we sort of ended up heading on the Interstate with about 100 bikes! We took over all 4 lanes for almost two miles, and then while waiting on the University Ave. overpass, 63 of us were arrested by

Berkeley police after they blocked off both ends of the overpass. Cyclists were violently pulled from their bikes, cuffed, and some were beaten by police who proceeded to impound all of our bicycles without giving any of us receipts for them! The police then proceeded to "lose" about a dozen of these bikes, forcing their owners to file claims for them. Talk about a bureaucratic nightmare! 12 of the cyclists are still facing bogus charges ranging from "Unlawful Assembly" to "Felony Assault with a deadly weapon", that weapon being - a bicycle!

We have had 2 East Bay rides since the one with arrests, and both have been very peaceful. The Xerocracy seems to be really kicking in, as more and more cyclists are making and passing out literature. Our last ride also included a lemonade pit-stop at the Auto Club office and a Food not Bombs serving at the end.

For more info on Critical Mass, such as tips for starting your own, write us! East Bay Critical Mass - 2nd Friday of each month: 5:30 pm at Berkeley BART San Francisco Critical Mass - last Friday of each month at 5:30 pm at Justin Herman Plaza (Embarcadero BART)

LOCAL PROJECTS ACTIONS EVENTS

Taking back the airwaves - Micro power broadcasting continues to grow

Despite the attempt by the FCC to fine Stephen Dunifer $20,000 for his activities with Free Radio Berkeley (on the air Sundays from 9 PM to 12 Midnight at 88.1 FM) and the folded after being threatened by the FCC.

In all probability the last thing the FCC wants is for a lot of these cases to end up in court where there is still some chance of a fa

Long Haul A

On the July 9 East Bay ride, after we had already biked about 10 miles, we sort of ended up heading on the Interstate with about 100 bikes! We took over all 4 lanes for almost two miles, and then while waiting on the University Ave. overpass, 63 of us were arrested by

For more info on Critical Mass, such as tips for starting your own, write us! East Bay Critical Mass - 2nd Friday of each month: 5:30 pm at Berkeley BART San Francisco Critical Mass - last Friday of each month at 5:30 pm at Justin Herman Plaza (Embarcadero BART)

Taking back the airwaves - Micro power broadcasting continues to grow

Despite the attempt by the FCC to fine Stephen Dunifer $20,000 for his activities with Free Radio Berkeley (on the air Sundays from 9 PM to 12 Midnight at 88.1 FM) and the recent incident with San Francisco Liberation Radio, more people are being taught how to build their own transmitters and put stations on the air. Several more stations will be taking to the air in Berkeley as part of a Free Radio Network. At least two operations are running in Southern Marin County. San Francisco Liberation Radio is on the air twice a week, Wednesdays & Saturdays from 8 PM to 10 PM. A station is reported to be operating in the Mission District as well.

On the first of July attorneys for Stephen Dunifer and Free Radio Berkeley filed a 13 page response to the Notice of Apparent Liability brought against Stephen Dunifer. To this date the FCC has yet to respond to the folded after being threatened by the FCC.

In all probability the last thing the FCC wants is for a lot of these cases to end up in court where there is still some chance of a favorable free speech ruling or finding. It is questionable as to whether the FCC has the regulatory authority to impose such huge fines on alleged unlicensed broadcasters since the regulatory section they are using was meant for licensed commercial operations. A whole other section deals with unlicensed operations and limits the fine to a maximum of $1000.

Meanwhile, the Micro Power Broadcasting workshops continue on a regular basis at the Long Haul/Infoshop in Berkeley. During October workshops were held in San Francisco and Garberville. Plans are being made for workshops in other communities during the course of the next few months. Work is progressing on Free TV Berkeley with the goal of having regular VHF or UHF broadcasts on the air by the end of October. Free Radio Berkeley is offering a complete line of broadcasting kits at very low cost to enable as many people as possible to put stations on the air.

Reports continue to come in from around the country from people either getting ready to put a station on the air or seeking further information on how to do it. People are realizing the necessity of breaking the corporate media choke hold on the free flow of news, information, culture and art. Media attention is increasing as well: a major article will appear in Mondo 2000 which will be out by the end of October.

For further information on workshops schedules, other events and broadcast times, call the Free Radio Berkeley voice mail number - (510) 464-3041.

legal arguments and issues that have been brought forth. It is apparent these high fine amounts are essentially big sticks the FCC waves at people to scare them off the air. This was the case with Free Radio Detroit who

FCC SENDS 20 SF COPS FOR BROADCASTER'S I.D.

In a scene resembling a French film noir, one person associated with San Francisco Liberation Radio was detained by 20 San Francisco police officers until his ID could be presented to FCC agent David Doon.

Long Haul A

What is the Infoshop?

The Infoshop is a political storefront space in Berkeley that is a resource and action center for activists and that provides outreach to the public.

Located in the front room of the Long Haul, it features a reading room with access to a variety of alternative newspapers, texts, magazines, books, etc. There are bulletin boards with lots of flyers about upcoming resources available to doing activist work. Often coffee, tea and free food are available.

Groups and individuals organize events, prepare literature and flyers, hold meetings and discussions, and do other types of work out of the space. The Infoshop provides people opportunities to educate themselves about issues and to keep up to date on activist news around the world. The Infoshop also actively networks with other activists to let them know what is going on here.

The Infoshop is a place where "the general public" can come to get alternative information and it provides a chance for activists to get information out to a public audience. Everyday people walk in off the street to see what the Infoshop is about. We would like to increase the outreach and use of the space for the public. If you are in a political organization that has flyers or information to get out, send a copy to the Infoshop and it will get displayed. (We are also actively seeking political magazines, newspapers, etc. If you send one copy we can put it in our library. We also have free distribution racks and we can sell publications on consignment as well.)

The Infoshop is an anti-profit political project which means there are no paid staff, no bosses and no owners. We accept (and need) donations to pay the rent and actively need people willing to organize benefits, bands to play benefits, people with creative fundraising ideas, etc. The Infoshop also sells various political books, magazines, texts, patches, t-shirts and other items that help pay the rent.

If you are interested in getting involved in events and there are often extra flyers that people can take and post around.

The Infoshop is officially open 5 days a week and usually if someone is there you can hang out when it isn't open.

People who come in can select something to read and then sit in a usually fairly quiet environment to read. People can hang out or work on projects. The Infoshop is also a good build their own transmitters and put stations on the air. Several more stations will be taking to the air in Berkeley as part of a Free Radio Network. At least two operations are running in Southern Marin County. San Francisco Liberation Radio is on the air twice a week, Wednesdays & Saturdays from 8 PM to 10 PM. A station is reported to be operating in the Mission District as well.

On the first of July attorneys for Stephen Dunifer and Free Radio Berkeley filed a 13 page response to the Notice of Apparent Liability brought against Stephen Dunifer. To this date the FCC has yet to respond to the legal arguments and issues that have been brought forth. It is apparent these high fine amounts are essentially big sticks the FCC waves at people to scare them off the air. This was the case with Free Radio Detroit who regulatory authority to impose such huge fines on alleged unlicensed broadcasters since the regulatory section they are using was meant for licensed commercial operations. A whole other section deals with unlicensed operations and limits the fine to a maximum of $1000.

Meanwhile, the Micro Power Broadcasting workshops continue on a regular basis at the Long Haul/Infoshop in Berkeley. During October workshops were held in San Francisco and Garberville. Plans are being made for workshops in other communities during the course of the next few months. Work is progressing on Free TV Berkeley with the goal of having regular VHF or UHF broadcasts on the air by the end of October. Free Radio Berkeley is offering a complete line of broadcasting kits at very low cost to enable as many people as possible to put stations on the air.

Reports continue to come in from around the country from people either getting ready to put a station on the air or seeking further information on how to do it. People are realizing the necessity of breaking the corporate media choke hold on the free flow of news, information, culture and art. Media attention is increasing as well: a major article will appear in Mondo 2000 which will be out by the end of October.

For further information on workshops schedules, other events and broadcast times, call the Free Radio Berkeley voice mail number - (510) 464-3041.

FCC SENDS 20 SF COPS FOR BROADCASTER'S I.D.

In a scene resembling a French film noir, one person associated with San Francisco Liberation Radio was detained by 20 San Francisco police officers until his ID could be presented to FCC agent David Doon.

At approximately 9:30 PM on Wednesday, September 22, Richard Edmondson was approached by David Doon who asked for identification. After refusing to produce identification and answer any questions, Richard drove away and was stopped on Webster Street by SF police officers who blocked off the entire northbound lane of the street with 8 vehicles. A confused scene ensued wherein the police officers had virtually no idea of what was going on or why such massive backup had been called. Richard was ordered to get out of his vehicle with his hands up and in clear sight by obviously agitated SF police, who subsequently handcuffed him.

SF police officers were heard to ask "who is this guy?" and "what do we have him for?" - for several minutes these questions went unanswered. By the time the FCC agent arrived to examine Richard's ID, there were at least 20 SF police officers on the scene. After learning what was going on, some of the officers were clearly exasperated at having their time wasted by this FCC agent. A few were amused and asked for information regarding San Francisco Liberation Radio's frequency and broadcast schedule. After Richard's ID was verified, he was released without any further consequences by the SF police.

The Infoshop is a political storefront space in Berkeley that is a resource and action center for activists and that provides outreach to the public.

Located in the front room of the Long Haul, it features a reading room with access to a variety of alternative newspapers, texts, magazines, books, etc. There are bulletin boards with lots of flyers about upcoming events and there are often extra flyers that people can take and post around.

The Infoshop is officially open 5 days a week and usually if someone is there you can hang out when it isn't open.

People who come in can select something to read and then sit in a usually fairly quiet environment to read. People can hang out or work on projects. The Infoshop is also a good place to come and hook up with people to find out about what is going on. There are also resources available to doing activist work. Often coffee, tea and free food are available.

Groups and individuals organize events, prepare literature and flyers, hold meetings and discussions, and do other types of work out of the space. The Infoshop provides people opportunities to educate themselves about issues and to keep up to date on activist news around the world. The Infoshop also actively networks with other activists to let them know what is going on here.

The Infoshop is a place where "the general public" can come to get alternative information and it provides a chance for activists to get information out to a public audience. Everyday people walk in off the street to see what the Infoshop is about. We would like to increase the outreach and use of the space for the public. If you are in a political organization that has flyers or information to get out, send a copy to the Infoshop and it will get displayed. (We are also actively seeking political magazines, newspapers, etc. If you send one copy we can put it in our library. We also have free distribution racks and we can sell publications on consignment as well.)

The Infoshop is an anti-profit political project which means there are no paid staff, no bosses and no owners. We accept (and need) donations to pay the rent and actively need people willing to organize benefits, bands to play benefits, people with creative fundraising ideas, etc. The Infoshop also sells various political books, magazines, texts, patches, t-shirts and other items that help pay the rent.

If you are interested in getting involved in the Infoshop, volunteers can staff the shop during open hours or participate in other forms of work to keep the space open.

New Open Hours at the Infoshop

Effective Nov. 1, 1993

Monday (Women's-Only Space) 4-8 pm

Tuesday 3-9 pm

Saturday 3-6 pm

Thursday 3-9 pm

Sunday 3-9 pm

The Infoshop is also open during all events at the Long Haul including during Video night (Tuesday and/or Wednesday 8-11) and Cafe Night (Sunday 6-11). The Long Haul may be unlocked during other times but the above times are dependable.

de
keley BART, 5:30

After they blocked off both erpass. Cyclists were violently ir bikes, cuffed, and some were e who proceeded to impound all es without giving any of us
m! The police then proceeded a dozen of these bikes, forcing o file claims for them. Talk ucratic nightmare! 12 of the facing bogus charges ranging Assembly" to "Felony Assault eapon", that weapon being - a d 2 East Bay rides since the one and both have been very Xerocracy seems to be really ore and more cyclists are making t literature. Our last ride also nade pit-stop at the Auto Club od not Bombs serving at the o on Critical Mass, such as tips ur own, write us! East Bay nd Friday of each month: 5:30

BART San Francisco Critical
ay of each month at 5:30 pm at Plaza (Embarcadero BART)

LOCAL

PROJECTS ACTIONS EVENTS

Penelope wants

To send Books to prison

The Prisoners Literature Project is a all-volunteer group that sends out magazines, newsletters, pamphlets, comics to prisoners all over the state request. Currently, we are answering from June '93. We receive over 100 letters every month. We rely on donations of books and money for envelopes, stationary, etc.

Recently, we have been setting up front of the post office and asking send out a package. We have been very good response. We are planning upcoming benefit.

We meet weekly, every Thursday Bound Together Bookstore, 8 pm.
bookstore for our mailing address (1015 St., San Francisco, CA 94117), meeting and storage of books. There is a possibility that we might move to EpiCenter but we have more space.

We do not have a mailing list and we correspond with prisoners (except to note with the book package.) We get of requests. We are in need of donations Afro-American and Mexican heritage especially, since these are the most requests and we are short on these Books must be soft-cover and not damaged. All help will be appreciated.
Prisoner thank-you letters explaining are read cover to cover and passed

Long Haul Activist Space

What is the Infoshop?

is a political storefront space a resource and action center that provides outreach to the front room of the Long Haul, ding room with access to a native newspapers, texts, s, etc. There are bulletin of flyers about upcoming resources available to doing activist work.

Often coffee, tea and free food are available.

Groups and individuals organize events,
prepare literature and flyers, hold meetings
and discussions, and do other types of work out of the space. The Infoshop provides people opportunities to educate themselves
about issues and to keep up to date on activist news around the world. The Infoshop also actively networks with other activists to let them know what is going on here.

The Infoshop is a place where "the general public" can come to get alternative information and it provides a chance for activists to get information out to a public audience. Everyday people walk in off the street to see what the

What's happening at Long Haul

The Long Haul has been a Berkeley activist center since 1979. This summer a small group of activists proposed starting an Infoshop in the storefront. At the time the Long Haul was having tough times both financially and in terms of energy. The Long Haul agreed to let people start the project and since then Long Haul has been the site of many exciting activities as well as a few hardships. Many people who didn't know each other (as well as some who did) have come together.

Many groups and individuals have used the space for meetings and events. Some of the stuff that has happened includes: regular pirate radio workshops, women's self-defense classes,
political/art/cultural videos, a regular Sunday night cafe, political discussions and meetings, an ongoing women's day (Mondays), darkroom and cliquish/non-sectarian as possible and broad use of the space. A more art/activist focus would also be a possible development. We are open to new ideas.

Unfortunately a lot of our energy has been trying to pay the rent, bills and other back-rent debt. We have currently the current back debt ($1100 out of $2000)
there is another several year old $2000 are negotiating with the landlord. There in a work-for-debt swap. Some people to insulate the roof of the Long Haul make it more wheelchair accessible around December we are going to with carpentry skills as well as other to help out. It's been a real struggle to meet as well as keep up the space.

info on Critical Mass, such as tips your own, write us! East Bay Mass - 2nd Friday of each month: 5:30
Berkeley BART San Francisco Critical 1st Friday of each month at 5:30 pm at erman Plaza (Embarcadero BART)

Afro-American and Mexican especially, since these are requests and we are short Books must be soft-cover damaged. All help will Prisoner thank-you letters are read cover to cover and

Long Haul Activist Space

What is the Infoshop?

Infoshop is a political storefront space that is a resource and action center and that provides outreach to the

In the front room of the Long Haul, a reading room with access to a alternative newspapers, texts, books, etc. There are bulletin boards with lots of flyers about upcoming there are often extra flyers that take and post around.

Infoshop is officially open 5 days a week if someone is there you can hang out open.

who come in can select something to then sit in a usually fairly quiet to read. People can hang out or projects. The Infoshop is also a good place and hook up with people to find what is going on. There are also resources available to doing activist work.

Often coffee, tea and free food are available.

Groups and individuals organize events,
prepare literature and flyers, hold meetings
and discussions, and do other types of work out of the space. The Infoshop provides people opportunities to educate themselves
about issues and to keep up to date on activist
news around the world. The Infoshop also actively networks with other activists to let them know what is going on here.

The Infoshop is a place where "the general
public" can come to get alternative information
and it provides a chance for activists to get information out to a public audience. Everyday people walk in off the street to see what the Infoshop is about. We would like to increase the outreach and use of the space for the public.
If you are in a political organization that has flyers or information to get out, send a copy to the Infoshop and it will get displayed. (We are also actively seeking political magazines, newspapers, etc. If you send one copy we can put it in our library. We also have free distribution racks and we can sell publications on consignment as well.)

The Infoshop is an anti-profit political project which means there are no paid staff, no bosses and no owners. We accept (and need) donations to pay the rent and actively need people willing to organize benefits, bands to play benefits, people with creative fundraising ideas, etc. The Infoshop also sells various political books, magazines, texts, patches, t-shirts and other items that help pay the rent.

If you are interested in getting involved in the Infoshop, volunteers can staff the shop during open hours or participate in other forms of work to keep the space open.

Open Hours at the Infoshop

Effective Nov. 1, 1993

Monday (Women's-Only Space) 4-8 pm
Tuesday 3-9 pm
Wednesday 3-9 pm
Saturday 3-6 pm
Sunday 3-9 pm

Infoshop is also open during all events at the Long Haul including during Video night and/or Wednesday 8-11) and Cafe Night (Sunday 6-11). The Long Haul may be open other times but the above times are dependable.

What's happening at Long

The Long Haul has been a Berkeley activist center since 1979. This summer a small group of activists proposed starting an Infoshop in the storefront. At the time the Long Haul was having tough times both financially and in terms of energy. The Long Haul agreed to let people start the project and since then Long Haul has been the site of many exciting activities as well as a few hardships. Many people who didn't know each other (as well as some who did) have come together.

Many groups and individuals have used the space for meetings and events. Some of the stuff
that has happened includes: regular pirate radio
workshops, women's self-defense classes,
political/art/cultural videos, a regular Sunday
night cafe, political discussions and meetings, an ongoing women's day (Mondays), darkroom and silkscreening collectives, political prisoners events including a lecture by a former Peruvian prisoner and of course the Infoshop. This issue of the Slingshot was also pasted up there.

Some other ideas in the works include dance parties (mixed and women's-only) and offering free school classes. (People are already offering Spanish and German lessons in addition to the Women's self-defense classes.) We would like to see more people get involved and organize a diversity of activities. We are encouraging other political groups, and individuals to join us.

Many different groups, with a spectrum of politics, have used the Long Haul for meetings or events. The Long Haul is trying to be as non-cliquish/non-sectarian as possi broad use of the space. A m focus would also be a development. We are open ideas.

Unfortunately a lot of our e trying to pay the rent, bills back-rent debt. We have cu the current back debt ($1100 there is another several year are negotiating with the landl in a work-for-debt swap. Som to insulate the roof of the L make it more wheelchair acce around December we are go with carpentry skills as well a to help out. It's been a real st meet as well as keep up the need help—we need you.

Besides the Infoshop, the spaces, two lofts, a large darkroom, a kitchen and a ba Haul. Currently there are s available for cheap rent. Con

Some of our immediate go the use of the Long Haul and of people and activities here, stable, become better organiz base for community and activ anyone interested in any projects to get involved. Righ lot of good ideas that could b just had more people involved.

Events, meetings & Pro

Darkroom/silkscreen collective - The collective has constructed a darkroom in Free Radio Berkeley - Micro power radio project which conducts workshops, in InfoCafe (Cafe Night) - Good & cheap vegetarian/vegan food served most Sun
Infoshop - Reading room, publication library, t-shirts, books and political resour Justice for Gary Graham Coalition - Organizes to stop the execution of Gary G
Long Haul/EpiCenter video night - Videos on political topics are generally prese
Love and Rage - National Revolutionary Anarchist Newspaper. West Coast offi Slingshot Newspaper - Radical newspaper published irregularly. Has office spa Social Club, The - Critical Theory oriented organization that meets at Long Hau
Women's Action Coalition (WAC) - Meets every Monday at 7 pm at Long Haul.
Women's Only Space - Every Monday at the is Women-only space. Infoshop is o
Work Parties - The first Saturday of every month. Come by to help with wood

3124 Shattuck • Berkeley •
2 blocks East of Ashby BA

CAL

Penelope wants you!

To send Books to prisoners . . .

The Prisoners Literature Project (PLP) is an all-volunteer group that sends out free books, magazines, newsletters, pamphlets and comics to prisoners all over the states, upon request. Currently, we are answering letters from June '93. We receive over a hundred letters every month. We rely solely on donations of books and money for postage, envelopes, stationary, etc.

Recently, we have been setting up a table in front of the post office and asking people to send out a package. We have been getting a very good response. We are planning an upcoming benefit.

We meet weekly, every Thursday nite, at Bound Together Bookstore, 8 pm. We use the bookstore for our mailing address (1369 Haight St., San Francisco, CA 94117), meeting place and storage of books. There is a possibility that we might move to EpiCenter because they have more space.

We do not have a mailing list and we do not correspond with prisoners (except for a brief note with the book package.) We get all kinds of requests. We are in need of dictionaries, Afro-American and Mexican heritage books especially, since these are the most popular requests and we are short on these subjects. Books must be soft-cover and not too damaged. All help will be appreciated. Prisoner thank-you letters explain how books are read cover to cover and passed around.

EPICENTER SWITCHBOARD

IN TO
4

431-4600

INFORMATION HOTLINE

This October, 1993, marks one year that the Epicenter Switchboard has been developing as the Bay Area's Do-It-Yourself free information phone line. We list -via our Filemaker Pro computer database- a vast array of social services, political and activist groups, events and culture (counter), visitor assistance, education, food, etc., and we connect callers to the info they require to fulfill their needs. The Epicenter Switchboard is a collective and completely volunteer-run. We acknowledge that people cannot help themselves without a clear view of the possibilities.

The project grew out of the concerns of volunteers working at the Epicenter Zone, a not-for-profit punk record store, that their space at 475 Valencia St. in the safe and beautiful Mission District of San Francisco was not living up to its tag as a community center. A desire to more actively engage with/help the larger community outside of hardcore moved the record store volunteers and previous volunteers with the defunct-Haight Ashbury Switchboard to form the new project.

Since then, besides operating the phone line from Noon to 6 pm Monday through Saturday, the Switchboard has embarked on a number of activities including the Video Project

(politically relevant documentaries and media showings jointly coordinated with the Infoshop and Gilman St. venue in Berkeley), organizing benefit concerts, participating in the Epicenter Women's' Outreach weekend, hosting ongoing open-forum potluck discussions on the nature of collectives, and supporting direct-action organizations like Food Not Bombs in their time of need amidst arrests and oppression by city bureaucracies.

The Epicenter Switchboard, propelled by women, queers, anarchists, activists, punks, a skin, progressives, and pagans alike, is looking towards a future filled with problem-solving. Whether that be the inner dynamics of collective process, dealing with racism and sexism within ourselves and the society around us, working efficiently and cultivating community ties, getting 'on-line' and reaching out further through the modem to other D.I.Y. projects and radical collectives, or finding ways to keep the project alive and able to serve its purpose.... we voluntarily act on our desire to create a fairer world where people help each other, prosper through mutual aid, and relate and communicate in equality and respect.

Our number is (415) 431-4600 and our mailing address is 475 Valencia St., 2nd Floor, SF, CA 94103
Em Eroding

Activist Space

Afro-American and Mexican heritage books especially, since these are the most popular requests and we are short on these subjects. Books must be soft-cover and not too damaged. All help will be appreciated. Prisoner thank-you letters explain how books are read cover to cover and passed around.

hardcore moved the record store volunteers and previous volunteers with the defunct-Haight Ashbury Switchboard to form the new project.

Since then, besides operating the phone line from Noon to 6 pm Monday through Saturday, the Switchboard has embarked on a number of activities including the Video Project serve its purpose.... we voluntarily act on our desire to create a fairer world where people help each other, prosper through mutual aid, and relate and communicate in equality and respect.

Our number is (415) 431-4600 and our mailing address is 475 Valencia St., 2nd Floor, SF, CA 94103
Em Eroding

Activist Space

What's happening at Long Haul?

The Long Haul has been a Berkeley activist center since 1979. This summer a small group of activists proposed starting an Infoshop in the storefront. At the time the Long Haul was having tough times both financially and in terms of energy. The Long Haul agreed to let people start the project and since then Long Haul has been the site of many exciting activities as well as a few hardships. Many people who didn't know each other (as well as some who did) have come together.

Many groups and individuals have used the space for meetings and events. Some of the stuff that has happened includes: regular pirate radio workshops, women's self-defense classes, political/art/cultural videos, a regular Sunday night cafe, political discussions and meetings, an ongoing women's day (Mondays), darkroom and silkscreening collectives, political prisoners events including a lecture by a former Peruvian prisoner and of course the Infoshop. This issue of the Slingshot was also pasted up there.

Some other ideas in the works include dance parties (mixed and women's-only) and offering free school classes. (People are already offering Spanish and German lessons in addition to the Women's self-defense classes.) We would like to see more people get involved and organize a diversity of activities. We are encouraging other political groups, and individuals to join us.

Many different groups, with a spectrum of politics, have used the Long Haul for meetings or events. The Long Haul is trying to be as non-cliquish/non-sectarian as possible and welcomes a broad use of the space. A more art/music/cultural focus would also be a possible area of development. We are open to new and different ideas.

Unfortunately a lot of our energy has gone into trying to pay the rent, bills and old Long Haul back-rent debt. We have currently paid off half the current back debt ($1100 out of $2200) and there is another several year old $2000 debt we are negotiating with the landlord. This may result in a work-for-debt swap. Some people would like to insulate the roof of the Long Haul as well as make it more wheelchair accessible and sometime around December we are going to need people with carpentry skills as well as other shitworkers to help out. It's been a real struggle to make ends meet as well as keep up the energy level. We need help—we need you.

Besides the Infoshop, there are three office spaces, two lofts, a large meeting space, a darkroom, a kitchen and a bathroom in the Long Haul. Currently there are some office spaces available for cheap rent. Contact us.

Some of our immediate goals are to increase the use of the Long Haul and broaden the range of people and activities here, become financially stable, become better organized and become a base for community and activism. We welcome anyone interested in any of these goals or projects to get involved. Right now there are a lot of good ideas that could become reality if we just had more people involved.

Office Spaces for Rent:

2 small offices (approx. 100 sq/ft) and one loft area (approx. 200 sq/ft) are available for rent to progressive organizations or projects. Located 2 blocks from BART in South Berkeley area. Cheap rent ($100-$150) is very negotiable. All offices have access to shared meeting room, bathroom, kitchen, photography darkroom, fax and computers. Interested? contact us. (510) 848-6466.

Long Haul/Infoshop Magic Fairy Wish List

If you want to help us out and you have any of these things, PLEASE donate until it hurts. (Please, however, only donate things which work. We already have a little too much junk hanging around.)

Money for rent, bills, backrent
Books, zines, magazines, newspapers or videos for the library (current is better than historical)
Photocopier
Laser printer and/or Computer scanner
Macintosh computer
Good, powerful, working vacuum cleaner
Coffee or tea
Compact fluorescent (energy efficient) light bulbs
VCR and/or TV (yes, TV)
Print-washer or Print-dryer for darkroom
Photo chemicals or paper
Office supplies

Events, meetings & Projects at Long Haul

Darkroom/silkscreen collective - The collective has constructed a darkroom in the Long Haul and meets to discuss its operation.

Free Radio Berkeley - Micro power radio project which conducts workshops, including how to build your own FM transmitter, once a month.

InfoCafe (Cafe Night) - Good & cheap vegetarian/vegan food served most Sundays at 6 pm. Proceeds benefit Long Haul rent fund.

Infoshop - Reading room, publication library, t-shirts, books and political resources. Occupies front space at the Long Haul.

The Long Haul has been a Berkeley activist center since 1979. This summer a small group of activists proposed starting an Infoshop in the storefront. At the time the Long Haul was having tough times both financially and in terms of energy. The Long Haul agreed to let people start the project and since then Long Haul has been the site of many exciting activities as well as a few hardships. Many people who didn't know each other (as well as some who did) have come together.

Many groups and individuals have used the space for meetings and events. Some of the stuff that has happened includes: regular pirate radio workshops, women's self-defense classes, political/art/cultural videos, a regular Sunday night cafe, political discussions and meetings, an ongoing women's day (Mondays), darkroom and silkscreening collectives, political prisoners events including a lecture by a former Peruvian prisoner and of course the Infoshop. This issue of the Slingshot was also pasted up there.

Some other ideas in the works include dance parties (mixed and women's-only) and offering free school classes. (People are already offering Spanish and German lessons in addition to the Women's self-defense classes.) We would like to see more people get involved and organize a diversity of activities. We are encouraging other political groups, and individuals to join us.

Many different groups, with a spectrum of politics, have used the Long Haul for meetings or events. The Long Haul is trying to be as non-clishish/non-sectarian as possible and welcomes a broad use of the space. A more art/music/cultural focus would also be a possible area of development. We are open to new and different ideas.

Unfortunately a lot of our energy has gone into trying to pay the rent, bills and old Long Haul back-rent debt. We have currently paid off half the current back debt ($1100 out of $2200) and there is another several year old $2000 debt we are negotiating with the landlord. This may result in a work-for-debt swap. Some people would like to insulate the roof of the Long Haul as well as make it more wheelchair accessible and sometime around December we are going to need people with carpentry skills as well as other shitworkers to help out. It's been a real struggle to make ends meet as well as keep up the energy level. We need help—we need you.

Besides the Infoshop, there are three office spaces, two lofts, a large meeting space, a darkroom, a kitchen and a bathroom in the Long Haul. Currently there are some office spaces available for cheap rent. Contact us.

Some of our immediate goals are to increase the use of the Long Haul and broaden the range of people and activities here, become financially stable, become better organized and become a base for community and activism. We welcome anyone interested in any of these goals or projects to get involved. Right now there are a lot of good ideas that could become reality if we just had more people involved.

Office Spaces for Rent:

2 small offices (approx. 100 sq/ft) and one loft area (approx. 200 sq/ft) are available for rent to progressive organizations or projects. Located 2 blocks from BART in South Berkeley area. Cheap rent ($100-$150) is very negotiable. All offices have access to shared meeting room, bathroom, kitchen, photography darkroom, fax and computers. Interested? contact us. (510) 848-6466.

Long Haul/Infoshop Magic Fairy Wish List

If you want to help us out and you have any of these things, PLEASE donate until it hurts. (Please, however, only donate things which work. We already have a little too much junk hanging around.)

Money for rent, bills, backrent
Books, zines, magazines, newspapers or videos for the library (current is better than historical)
Photocopier
Laser printer and/or Computer scanner
Macintosh computer
Good, powerful, working vacuum cleaner
Coffee or tea
Compact fluorescent (energy efficient) light bulbs
VCR and/or TV (yes, TV)
Print-washer or Print-dryer for darkroom
Photo chemicals or paper
Office supplies
Art supplies, paint, brushes
Sticker paper or mailing labels
Silkscreen materials
Blank t-shirts, new or used Fiberglass insulation, Plywood or 2 X 4s

Misc. Note:

The Long Haul operates a flea market space to raise rent money. Donate your flea marketable items. Call for dropoff location.

Events, meetings & Projects at Long Haul

Darkroom/silkscreen collective - The collective has constructed a darkroom in the Long Haul and meets to discuss its operation.

Free Radio Berkeley - Micro power radio project which conducts workshops, including how to build your own FM transmitter, once a month.

InfoCafe (Cafe Night) - Good & cheap vegetarian/vegan food served most Sundays at 6 pm. Proceeds benefit Long Haul rent fund.

Infoshop - Reading room, publication library, t-shirts, books and political resources. Occupies front space at the Long Haul.

Justice for Gary Graham Coalition - Organizes to stop the execution of Gary Graham, sentenced to death in Texas. Contact 798-3698.

Long Haul/EpiCenter video night - Videos on political topics are generally presented on Tuesday at 8 pm at Long Haul.

Love and Rage - National Revolutionary Anarchist Newspaper. West Coast office space at Long Haul.

Slingshot Newspaper - Radical newspaper published irregularly. Has office space at Long Haul. Meets weekly while preparing an issue.

Social Club, The - Critical Theory oriented organization that meets at Long Haul and presents films every Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Women's Action Coalition (WAC) - Meets every Monday at 7 pm at Long Haul.

Women's Only Space - Every Monday at the is Women-only space. Infoshop is open from 4 to 8 and other special events are presented.

Work Parties - The first Saturday of every month. Come by to help with woodworking, clean up, organizing and other projects. Noon to 5.

3124 Shattuck • Berkeley • 97405 • At Woolsey, across from La Peña
2 blocks East of Ashby BART • 510-848-6466 • E-Mail: Resist@igc.org

Recent fascist attacks on the West Coast

SACRAMENTO, CA

July 25 - Temple B'Nai Israel firebombed

July 27 - NAACP office firebombed

August - NAACP's new office broken into and vandalized

August - "Carol's Books" an Afro-centric bookstore, windows broken, and racist stickers put on store

Oct. 2 - Japanese American Citizens League office firebombed

Oct. 5 - Asian American city councilman Jimmie Yee's house hit by molotov cocktail

Oct 14 - Sacramento office of the state Department of Fair Employment and Housing, which investigates cases of discrimination firebombed.

A group calling itself the Aryan Liberation Front claimed responsibility for each of the five bombings.

BAKERSFIELD, CA Sept. 20 - Abortion Clinic destroyed in firebombing

CASTRO VALLEY, CA Sept - Black women's car spraypainted with KKK graffiti.

CONCORD, CA Japanese exchange student shot and killed. His money and belongings were not taken. Unknown motive.

LA HABRA, CA Sept. 3, Tina Rixanne Rodriguez, a Black woman, killed by skins in front of her 3 year old daughter.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA Sept 10, Abortion Clinic firebombed

TACOMA, WA July - NAACP office fire bombed

SEATTLE, WA Pipe bomb tossed down chimney of "the Elite" a Gay bar, luckily it didn't go off.

Later, 2 neo-fascist pawns were arrested in Salinas, CA for the attacks in Tacoma and Seattle.

Chattanooga Demo

On September 11th ninety anarchists from a dozen cities held a rally and march in Chattanooga Tennessee. They were there to confront a planned Ku Klux Klan demo (which never materialized), to protest the 23 known murders of Blacks in police custody over the last two decades and demand that charges be dropped against the Chattanooga 8. The Chattanooga 8 are a group of anti-racist protesters arrested on May 13th, at

"Michael Brownshirt is a Nazi"

The new city manager of Tucson Arizona was greeted by these words spraypainted on City Hall as he started his first day of work July 6th. In his previous job as city manager of Berkeley (until being run out of town) Michael Brown(shirt) authorized the use of wooden, rubber and plastic bullets against People's Park protestors in 1991 and was a major asshole in general.

O.R. Overwhelmed in Denver

From August tenth through the fourteenth Operation Rescue and other anti-choice groups, coming out of their Cities of Refuge failure, targeted Denver for an anti-choice campaign ... and were smashed again.

Thirty pro-choicers met the handful of anti's who showed up to picket a doctor's house and

Fascists Routed in Montréal

During the week of September 21, Montreal hosted the Metropolis conference, a meeting of urban government officials from around the world, including a three-man delegation from France's National Front (NF — the neo-nazi group headed by Jean Marie Le Pen). On opening night some 250 demonstrators rallied outside the conference hall in protest on their presence. The following night over 1,000 people took to the streets, preventing a planned meeting between the French NF representatives, the Quebec NF chapter and other far-right organizations like the Heritage Front and the Church of the Creator. Riot police surrounded the building, having already escorted most of the fascists to safety. Antifascists got in a few punches on the stragglers, and then re-decorated the meeting hall with paint-filled eggs and smashed windows. None of the antifascists were hurt or arrested.

RIOT AND SQUAT! ITALIAN WORKERS REVOLT

CROTONE ITALY September 7

Crotone is a city in south Italy where a protest from the workers of ENICHEM exploded in violence. The ENI, a national chemical firm, decided to close down the largest and most important factory in the city. The union, knowing in advance of the closing of the factory, attempted to manipulate the workers with false promises of an agreement between the owners of the factory and the leader of the union. But the reality was that the factory was closing.

The "AUTONOMOUS WORKERS MEETING" immediately responded by organizing a strike, but this time the union leader had no role in the meeting. The workers rejected the union and organized a blockade of the highway and local train stations using containers full of dangerous quantities of phosphorous covered with water. This combination creates something like a time bomb effect in that if the water is removed or the containers are pushed over the phosphorous coming in contact with air will combust. The police tried to attack the demonstration, but to their surprise, the workers were prepared with stones and molotovs. The police failed to dis-

CASTRO VALLEY, CA Sept - Black women's car spraypainted with KKK graffiti.
CONCORD, CA Japanese exchange student shot and killed. His money and belongings were not taken. Unknown motive..
LA HABRA, CA Sept. 3, Tina Rixanne Rodriguez, a Black woman, killed by skins in front of her 3 year old daughter.
NEWPORT BEACH, CA Sept 10, Abortion Clinic firebombed
TACOMA, WA July - NAACP office fire bombed
SEATTLE, WA Pipe bomb tossed down chimney of "the Elite" a Gay bar, luckily it didn't go off.
 Later, 2 neo-fascist pawns were arrested in Salinas, CA for the attacks in Tacoma and Seattle.

Chattanooga Demo

On September 11th ninety anarchists from a dozen cities held a rally and march in Chattanooga Tennessee. They were there to confront a planned Ku Klux Klan demo (which never materialized), to protest the 23 known murders of Blacks in police custody over the last two decades and demand that charges be dropped against the Chattanooga 8. The Chattanooga 8 are a group of anti-racist protesters arrested on May 13th, at a "police memorial" ceremony for protesting the police murder of Black trucker Larry Powell eight months earlier and the refusal of a grand jury to prosecute the eight killer kops. After the successful rally John Johnson, one of the Chattanooga 8 was arrested after a scuffle with his neighbor who had sexually assaulted an anti-racist woman who had come to town for the demo. The police refused to press charges against the neighbor.

For more information or to send donations write: Chattanooga 8 Defense Campaign c/o Concerned Citizens for Justice, POB 1066, Federal Courthouse & Post Office Bldg., Chattanooga, TN 37401 or call Lorenzo Ervin 615-622-7614 or Maxine Cousin 615-698-8940.

I saw a man who stood on the White House lawn dousing himself with

O.R. Overwhelmed in Denver

From August tenth through the fourteenth Operation Rescue and other anti-choice groups, coming out of their Cities of Refuge failure, targeted Denver for an anti-choice campaign ... and were smashed again.

Thirty pro-choicers met the handful of anti's who showed up to picket a doctor's house and rendered the anti-choice picket totally impotent. At the Planned Parenthood clinic that day pro-choicers outnumbered the anti's seven hundred to two hundred, which was apparently the largest anti-choice mobilization O.R. was capable of, even during the Pope's visit with a hundred thousand extra Catholics in town for the week. When the Pope arrived in Denver to meet Bill Clinton another protest took place with about 50 people shouting "Pope-o go Homo" and "Two Four-Six-Eight. Dow Do You Know Your Pope Is Straight?" amidst the crowd of homophobic sheep.

wholesale

reduction of aquifers from coal slurry lines using incredible amounts of water, but the loss of the traditional Dine (Navajo) being removed from land above the coal approaches genocide. Indians and environmentalists met at Big Mountain this October to prepare for this international struggle. A large gathering is expected there in the spring including people who have fought Peabody

Fascists Routed in Montréal

During the week of September 21, Montreal hosted the Metropolis conference, a meeting of urban government officials from around the world, including a three-man delegation from France's National Front (NF — the neo-nazi group headed by Jean Marie Le Pen). On opening night some 250 demonstrators rallied outside the conference hall in protest on their presence. The following night over 1,000 people took to the streets, preventing a planned meeting between the French NF representatives, the Quebec NF chapter and other far-right organizations like the Heritage Front and the Church of the Creator. Riot police surrounded the building, having already escorted most of the fascists to safety. Antifascists got in a few punches on the stragglers, and then re-decorated the meeting hall with paint-filled eggs and smashed windows. None of the antifascists were hurt or arrested.

Big Mountain, Arizona

A move to question the use of coal, similar to the anti-nuclear movement, has begun. The costs of coal dependency are many; acid rain, ozone holes, black lung, labor catastrophes, destruction of entire eco-systems with open pit mines and

REVOLT

CROTONE ITALY September 7

Crotone is a city in south Italy where a protest from the workers of ENICHEM exploded in violence. The ENI, a national chemical firm, decided to close down the largest and most important factory in the city. The union, knowing in advance of the closing of the factory, attempted to manipulate the workers with false promises of an agreement between the owners of the factory and the leader of the union. But the reality was that the factory was closing.

The "AUTONOMOUS WORKERS MEETING" immediately responded by organizing a strike, but this time the union leader had no role in the meeting. The workers rejected the union and organized a blockade of the highway and local train stations using containers full of dangerous quantities of phosphorous covered with water. This combination creates something like a time bomb effect in that if the water is removed or the containers are pushed over the phosphorous coming in contact with air will combust. The police tried to attack the demonstration, but to their surprise, the workers were prepared with stones and molotovs. The police failed to disperse them.

The second action was to blockade the factory. All workers barricaded themselves inside and many began fires with small quantities of phosphorous and other flammable materials. The fire brigade tried many times to enter the building but the workers refused to let them inside.

For one week, the workers remained inside. The "WORKERS MEETING" organized a general strike in the city and 10,000 people participated in a demonstration of solidarity. The city is actually filled with cops but the factory, the train station and the highway remains occupied.

The union asked the workers to stay "calm" while they try to arrive at a "political solution". The workers have refused to negotiate with the union leaders until they can speak directly with the Minister of Industry in Rome.

WESTERN SHOSHONE

August 3, 1993 the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) published a public notice of Intent to Impound. Beginning Aug 8 1993 for the next 12 months the BLM is expected to be in the area to confiscate livestock. This is not an isolated incident. All across Indian Country the BLM, Forest Service, and the BIA have begun enforcing U.S. regulations upon the indigenous people and activists: the Earth First! encampment in Cove Mallard, ID was raided by 30 armed feds on prosecute the eight killer cops. After the successful rally John Johnson, one of the Chattanooga 8 was arrested after a scuffle with his neighbor who had sexually assaulted an anti-racist woman who had come to town for the demo. The police refused to press charges against the neighbor.

For more information or to send donations write: Chattanooga 8 Defense Campaign c/o Concerned Citizens for Justice, POB 1066, Federal Courthouse & Post Office Bldg., Chattanooga, TN 37401 or call Ervin 615-622-

Lorenzo 7614 or Maxine Cousin 615-698-8940.

I saw a man who stood on the White House lawn dousing himself with lillies and lighting himself into laughter, hysterical at the shrieking feet of those whites who where their crosses on their sleeves, with their spinning swastikas neatly pinned behind their eyes.

I've heard of those who have sliced the throats of their razors to see a stream of revolution spill off the tiles and into the mountains of that tiny land we call free.

I know of cages from whose teeth flow tears, rage and sedation tenants who refuse to feed the hand that bites us all. I know of crimes so unspeakable they must be shouted, of a land whose streets are paved with those without homes.

I know of a land numbered by the staccato upheaval of chorused consumerism, of those who mutter "love" under their breath while riding off into a gray horizon, sweetened with steel, and preserved through war.

by Chris Delvecchio

Our friend and fellow activist Chris Delveccio died on August 9nd 1993. We miss him alot.

to two hundred. The largest anti-choice mobilization O.R. was capable of, even during the Pope's visit with a hundred thousand extra Catholics in town for the week. When the Pope arrived in Denver to meet Bill Clinton another protest took place with about 50 people shouting "Pope-o go Homo" and "Two Four-Six-Eight. Dow Do You Know Your Pope Is Straight?" amidst the crowd of homophobic sheep.

Big Mountain, Arizona

A move to question the use of coal, similar to the anti-nuclear movement, has begun. The costs of coal dependency are many; acid rain, ozone holes, black lung, labor catastrophes, destruction of entire eco-systems with open pit mines and reduction of aquifers from coal slurry lines using incredible amounts of water, but the loss of the traditional Dine (Navajo) being removed from land above the coal approaches genocide. Indians and environmentalists met at Big Mountain this October to prepare for this international struggle. A large gathering is expected there in the spring including people who have fought Peabody Coal for a hundred years (West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee), Native Americans, alternative energy activists, and people in solidarity with native issues from the cities and country-sides.

Black Mesa coal (Big Mountain area) is low sulfur, low ash, making it prime for the 1995 Clean Air Act. This coal is closest to the surface making it cheaper to mine and closest to LA making it cheapest to ship, but Peabody says it has no interest in mining coal at Big Mountain. Ports in LA are being improved for shipments to Japan (Mitsubishi has contracts to make steel for auto bodies). The present open pit mines seem to be inching toward Big Mountain. The traditional Dine will not leave the sage, juniper, and cedar and their traditional way of life, the heart of the Dine. For info: Big Mountain Support Group, 2045 W. 3rd #34, Winslow, AZ 86047, fax and phone (602) 289-2707

LEONARD PELTIER UPDATE

Leonard Peltier is a Chippewa/Lakota American Indian Movement (AIM) activist who was framed on murder charges in the deaths of two FBI agents on the Pine Ridge Oglala Lakota Reservation in South Dakota on July 26, 1975.

The attack on the AIM camp that day was a planned action by the federal government to suppress AIM and the Traditional Oglala People, who they viewed as the only opposition to their plans to steal more Indian land to be exploited for uranium.

Leonard has spent over seventeen years incarcerated for a crime he did not commit. Evidence was fabricated, witnesses coerced, and evidence of his innocence withheld. The prosecuting attorney has admitted three times in a court of law "we don't know who killed those agents". Yet there seems to be little hope for justice. On July 7, 1993 the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals once again rejected Leonard's claims, not because they were invalid, but because they were not filed in a timely fashion.

Plans for a November march on Washington have been postponed till the spring if it is still necessary. There is a possibility he may be paroled in early December but barring that executive clemency seems to be one of the only options left. A campaign of letters, phone and fax is planned for the Whitehouse between Nov., 21 and Dec. 24, 1993 supporting Leonard for executive clemency: President Clinton, Whitehouse, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. Washington DC 20500. For additional info contact the Leonard Peltier Defense Committee, PO Box 583, Lawrence, KS 66044 (913) 842-5774 inside and many began fires with small quantities of phosphorous and other flammable materials. The fire brigade tried many times to enter the building but the workers refused to let them inside.

For one week, the workers remained inside. The "WORKERS MEETING" organized a general strike in the city and 10,000 people participated in a demonstration of solidarity. The city is actually filled with cops but the factory, the train station and the highway remains occupied.

The union asked the workers to stay "calm" while they try to arrive at a "political solution". The workers have refused to negotiate with the union leaders until they can speak directly with the Minister of Industry in Rome.

WESTERN SHOSHONE

August 3, 1993 the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) published a public notice of Intent to Impound. Beginning Aug 8 1993 for the next 12 months the BLM is expected to be in the area to confiscate livestock. This is not an isolated incident. All across Indian Country the BLM, Forest Service, and the BIA have begun enforcing U.S. regulations upon the indigenous people and activists: the Earth First! encampment in Cove Mallard, ID was raided by 30 armed feds on Aug 8; over 300 people were arrested at Clayoquot Sound, BC on Aug 10; the Dineh people received a notice to vacate; other encampments have also been affected.

People are invited to join peaceful direct action resistance to stop the round up and are requested to come self-sufficient and prepared for harsh conditions. Bring tents, sleeping bags and hiking boots - camo gear recommended. Donations of camp gear and food, along with money also needed.

Preparations for winter camp are under way: building materials are needed like plywood 2x4's, 2x6's, assorted nails and roofing paper. Call for directions (702) 468-0230.

Clifford Dann a Western Shoshone elder imprisoned for "assaulting an officer" while he was attempting to light himself on fire to protest the livestock confiscation has been moved to Lompoc, CA making family visits difficult because of distance. Letters can reach him addressed to Clifford Dann # 283-69-048 3600 Guard Rd. Federal Bureau of Prisons, Federal Correctional Institution, Lompoc, CA 93436 Western Shoshone advise that money needs to be sent through them. For info contact the Western Shoshone Defense Project, General Delivery, Crescent Valley, NV 89821, (702) 468-0230.

EF! IDAHO UPDATE

For two years Earth First! has been conducting a very intense and gutsy campaign in Idaho to protect the Cove/Mallard roadless area, a part of the largest unroaded wilderness in the lower 48 states.

This summer there were continuous actions in an attempt to stop road building. Dozens were arrested for blocking roads (through a variety of tactics: sitting in tripods, burying themselves in the road, locking their necks to heavy equipment or just sitting in the road) or for "trespassing" in the "closure" areas around the timber sales.

Many more were not arrested who almost daily built barricades, dug trenches and disabled forest service vehicles along the Noble and Grouse roads. A bulldozer was wrecked, a rock crusher torched, and wild-eyed camo-clad crazies launched daylight attacks on vehicles traveling the roads.

The Feds claimed to have found spiked trees (a charge which appears to be fabricated) and which was their excuse for a dawn raid by 40 armed agents upon the base camp. They have also announced the formation of a Grand Jury, with subpoenas and indictments of activists to follow. There has been a SLAPP suit filed by the road building contractors for $300,000 in damages, with everyone and their grandmother named on the suit. There have also been several acts of violence against activists from a hostile local community — which has been whipped into a frenzy by Forest Service lies and misinformation — including shots fired and several people beaten.

As winter comes to Idaho, the base camp has been shut down by the Health Department although many activists are staying while awaiting trial for charges incurred during the summer. Some activists are currently doing time. Both Noble and Grouse roads are completed, and loggers are expected to be in the woods felling trees this winter in preparation for hauling dead trees out in the spring.

The summer actions have definitely focused attention on the destruction of one of the wildest least spoiled areas on the continent. Unfortunately, the pace of destruction has only been slowed, not stopped, and many courageous activists are facing jail time and fines. Additionally, one group of activists who already spent 18 days in jail this summer for blocking Noble road are stuck waiting for trial with no support, no money and no place to live. (They were sleeping in a local park for a while.) It's butt cold in Idaho already so send these people money or write to get involved in the spring: PO Box 8968, Moscow, ID 83843.

Read and subscribe: Earth First! Journal, PO Box 1415, Eugene, OR 97440.

CLAYOQUOT SOUND RAINFORREST

Clayoquot Sound on Vancouver Island is the only remaining tract of temperate rainforest large enough to sustain its bio-diversity left in the world. The British Columbian government, after buying $50 million of stock (with public money!) in Macmillan Bloedel logging company, has opened up this treasure for logging. It's been a story of corruption and deceit; with Macmillan Bloedel ignoring two years of lengthy negotiations, a Premier elected on an environmental platform selling out, 14 new clearcut permits making a joke of claims of sustainable logging and the government spending 1.5 million (half public money) for a propaganda campaign to gloss it over. Unsustainable logging practices are leaving Vancouver Island with huge tracts of devastated clear cuts, herbicide contamination and damaged or destroyed prime salmon streams.

In July, four Bay Area activists traveled to Vancouver Island. In Victoria, we saw flyers suggesting that welfare recipients go take their own trees (worth about $20,000 each) rather than letting big companies rape and sell huge tracts to be sunk in storage in Japan or made into pulp for phone books in LA or SF. On the way to Tofino, we reached the Friends of Clayoquot Sound Peace camp, located in an area still devastated by a clearcut and burning 20 years ago. The camp had an information center, guidelines for participation in actions, a large well run camp kitchen and about 200 participants. Meetings were held daily by consensus to plan blockades of trucks building the logging roads. Each morning the camp awoke at 3:45 a.m., piled into carpools and assembled on a dirt road deep in the wilderness to await the trucks and mounties.

The actions were getting a fair amount of positive press and were attracting common working people to participate in the blockades. I saw one man who came with his whole family to witness his arrest. The organizers, Friends of Clayoquot Sound, a group that formed 15 years ago in response to logging threats, have structured the camp and daily blockades to encourage all kinds of people to participate, not just typical hardcore environmental activists. They require blockade participants to attend civil disobedience training as well as daily consensus meetings. Those expecting to be arrested are encouraged to announce their intentions at evening post-dinner meetings so they can plan the action and prepare for the consequences.

To date over 700 people have been arrested in the blockades and it has yet to be seen if the public outburst will sway the government position. Activists have also been building a trail into part of this beautiful forest that consists of over a mile of volunteer built boardwalks and extensive trails that will allow people access into the rain forest to see just what is at stake. The Peace Camp has just closed for winter although actions are expected to continue. If the threat to the forest persists, camp will open in the spring and will be looking for volunteers to lay their body down to preserve the largest temperate rainforest in North America.

For more info contact:

Friends of Clayoquot Sound
Box 489, Tofino, B.C. V0R 2Z0, Canada
(604) 725-4218

dictments of activists to follow. There has been SLAPP suit filed by the road building contractors for $300,000 in damages, with everyone and their grandmother named on the suit. There have also been several acts of violence against activists from a hostile local community — which has been whipped into a frenzy by Forest Service lies and misinformation — including shots fired and several people beaten.

As winter comes to Idaho, the base camp has been shut down by the Health Department although many activists are staying while awaiting trial for charges incurred during the summer. Some activists are currently doing time. Both Noble and Grouse roads are completed, and loggers are expected to be in the woods felling trees this winter in preparation for hauling dead trees out in the spring.

The summer actions have definitely focused attention on the destruction of one of the wildest least spoiled areas on the continent. Unfortunately, the pace of destruction has only been slowed, not stopped, and many courageous activists are facing jail time and fines. Additionally, one group of activists who already spent 18 days in jail this summer for blocking Noble road are stuck waiting for trial with no support, no money and no place to live. (They were sleeping in a local park for a while.) It's butt cold in Idaho already so send these people money or write to get involved in the spring: PO Box 8968, Moscow, ID 83843.

Read and subscribe: Earth First! Journal, PO Box 1415, Eugene, OR 97440.

Vancouver Island. In Victoria, we saw flyers suggesting that welfare recipients go take their own trees (worth about $20,000 each) rather than letting big companies rape and sell huge tracts to be sunk in storage in Japan or made into pulp for phone books in LA or SF. On the way to Tofino, we reached the Friends of Clayoquot Sound Peace camp, located in an area still devastated by a clearcut and burning 20 years ago. The camp had an information center, guidelines for participation in actions, a large well run camp kitchen and about 200 participants. Meetings were held daily by consensus to plan blockades of trucks building the logging roads. Each morning the camp awoke at 3:45 a.m., piled into carpools and assembled on a dirt road deep in the wilderness to await the trucks and mounties.

in the blockades and it has yet to be seen if the public outburst will sway the government position. Activists have also been building a trail into part of this beautiful forest that consists of over a mile of volunteer built boardwalks and extensive trails that will allow people access into the rain forest to see just what is at stake. The Peace Camp has just closed for winter although actions are expected to continue. If the threat to the forest persists, camp will open in the spring and will be looking for volunteers to lay their body down to preserve the largest temperate rainforest in North America.

For more info contact:

Friends of Clayoquot Sound
Box 489, Tofino, B.C. V0R 2Z0, Canada
(604) 725-4218

"WE ARE ALL RESPONSIBLE"

-an LA community response to police abuse

by Michael Zinzun

I am a former member of the Black Panther Party. One of the big concerns of the Black Panthers was police abuse. That was back in 1970, 1971. My concern continued to grow as police brutality continued to take place. We formed the Coalition Against Police Abuse (CAPA) as a grassroots response to this widespread problem in our community.

In 1986 I lost my eye as a result of a police assault. I was witnessing an incident of police abuse along with other community people. We caught them in the act and came out, demanding that they stop. Because they knew who I was, they singled me out and I was handcuffed, maced and hit in the eye. They expected me to go down, to acquiesce and give up the struggle at that time but I could see more clearly who my enemy was, and who my people's enemies are, with one eye than I could with two.

As a result of that incident, two officers were fired and I had a big settlement. Several officers got a number of days off. The community rallied around me because of the work I had been doing around police abuse. Had it been just another brother off the block, he should have gotten beaten up, blinded

We need a "Whistleblowers" Protection clause so that police officers who are serious about fighting police abuse are

As far as the Truce is concerned, we have made a lot of progress. The young people didn't create the conditions we live under, they are products of those conditions. All groups of all kinds, any organization with ten or more members should call the question, call the motion and take a stand supporting the Truce. The Truce can be applied everywhere. Young people want to have some kind of unity. They're tired of fighting each other.

The Los Angeles uprising spawned 19 uprisings throughout the country last spring. The USA put its international troops on alert. When they brought the folks who fought in the Persian Gulf war out here, they gave them no ammunition because they thought the Blacks would turn against them. It's a question of profit over people in this system. These young people want to get involved, but they can only go so far.

Every agenda that is created in this country comes from a small handful of white males. The police have been around since slavery. They were the slave-catchers. They're continuing to do the same thing. What we're saying is that if we don't get any justice, this country isn't going to get any peace. We know how to load and fire, how to take that route. We don't have to do that, if we come together and deal with this thing. It's not a question of a Bush or a Clinton. There's very little difference between them. It's the same raggedy old car, with just a change in drivers. We've got to change the "car", the system.

We want jobs and we want justice. We want what everybody else wants. We have problems in lack of medical care, in

"WE ARE ALL RESPONSIBLE"

-an LA community response to police abuse

by Michael Zinzun

I am a former member of the Black Panther Party. One of the big concerns of the Black Panthers was police abuse. That was back in 1970, 1971. My concern continued to grow as police brutality continued to take place. We formed the Coalition Against Police Abuse (CAPA) as a grassroots response to this widespread problem in our community.

In 1986 I lost my eye as a result of a police assault. I was witnessing an incident of police abuse along with other community people. We caught them in the act and came out, demanding that they stop. Because they knew who I was, they singled me out and I was handcuffed, maced and hit in the eye. They expected me to go down, to acquiesce and give up the struggle at that time but I could see more clearly who my enemy was, and who my people's enemies are, with one eye than I could with two.

As a result of that incident, two officers were fired and I had a big settlement. Several officers got a number of days off. The community rallied around me because of the work I had been doing around police abuse. Had it been just another brother off the block, he probably would have gotten beaten up, blinded and jailed. The only "settlement" would have been "settling" for two years' jail time instead of, say, ten. If Rodney King hadn't been videotaped, he would have been just another statistic, with no particular notice paid in the media or elsewhere.

I think that community control of police is mandatory. If the community understands this demand, then we will be able to confront the system collectively. If we do it individually, we're in trouble, we won't make it. We need a civilian police review board. We can't have a system in which the police have power OVER the community. We need an independent oversight body, with independent investigators and subpoena power. We cannot rely on police to police themselves. We need to know what officers are doing outside of the public eye, things they are covering up. We need independent prosecutors. We cannot rely on the district attorney or the city attorney who has a "sweetheart" relationship with the police to prosecute the same police who they work with in other cases.

We need a "Whistleblowers" Protection clause so that police officers who are serious about fighting police abuse are protected. There were 21 officers at the Rodney King beating. Some of them would have said something if they had the protection. We need a body that is independently elected and has the power to fire police. This body should be able to change the policies that are creating the oppressive conditions under which we live. We can get rid of police hollow-point bullets and of dogs that are trained to attack people, for example.

We have a Gang Truce going here, right out of South Central Los Angeles. It's not only a truce between gangs, it is a program for community-based reconstruction and development. The police are not welcoming it. The Establishment has not embraced it. The Gang Truce came about even before the uprising, following the acquittal of the four police officers in the beating of Rodney King. Oh, yeah. We don't call it a "riot". You have a "riot" at a football game when you lose. This was a rebellion, people speaking out against a whole series of injustices that have continued since the Watts uprising in 1965.

As far as the Truce is concerned, we have made a lot of progress. The young people didn't create the conditions we live under, they are products of those conditions. All groups of all kinds, any organization with ten or more members should call the question, call the motion and take a stand supporting the Truce. The Truce can be applied everywhere. Young people want to have some kind of unity. They're tired of fighting each other.

The Los Angeles uprising spawned 19 uprisings throughout the country last spring. The USA put its international troops on alert. When they brought the folks who fought in the Persian Gulf war out here, they gave them no ammunition because they thought the Blacks would turn against them. It's a question of profit over people in this system. These young people want to get involved, but they can only go so far.

Every agenda that is created in this country comes from a small handful of white males. The police have been around since slavery. They were the slave-catchers. They're continuing to do the same thing. What we're saying is that if we don't get any justice, this country isn't going to get any peace. We know how to load and fire, how to take that route. We don't have to do that, if we come together and deal with this thing. It's not a question of a Bush or a Clinton. There's very little difference between them. It's the same raggedy old car, with just a change in drivers. We've got to change the "car", the system.

We want jobs and we want justice. We want what everybody else wants. We have problems in lack of medical care, in high infant mortality rates. They're closing down hospitals in our community. We need health care. Our kids need jobs. We don't need "free-enterprise zones", we need "cooperative zones". We don't need a Peter Uebberoth to tell us what are needs are. We had more liquor stores in Los Angeles than in 32 STATES, and in two days we swept the majority of them clean. We're calling for a moratorium on the liquor stores in our community.

At CAPA, we deal with police abuse cases everyday. We have a 24-hour hotline and a 58-page manual on how people can get involved and organize against police abuse. You can call me at my house, at 213-684-1892, and I'll tell you how to do it. These conditions didn't happen overnight and they won't end overnight. We all have something to learn, something to do, something to share with each other in seeing to it that justice for all is served. Otherwise, there indeed will be no peace, nor should there be. And we are all responsible.

FEWER CARS -- MORE REASON

When I chose boots instead of a car in 1972, it made a difference. I could stop and smell flowers, touch leaves, or stare into a tree. I could write or read as I walked. I moved at the pace of nature. I became aware of car exhaust, motor sounds, and asbestos at nose level of small children in poor city areas. I didn't think about car insurance, parking meters, traffic cops, gas prices, car repairs, car mechanics, buying a car, selling a car, moving violations, parking tickets, renewing my license, having to have a picture ID. I rarely experience traffic jams, rarely rode on freeways, rarely felt the mechanized rhythms of internal combustion surrounding and permeating my body physically. I withdrew from primary participation in a need for oil and its complicity with wars for oil control. I needed less steel in my life.

Although I rarely got out to the "country" or saw other places, I learned about growing community. I stayed in touch with the nature imprisoned like myself in the city, and kept close to the earth, though separated from it by cement and asphalt and the rectangularity of windows, roads, and buildings. Now I find I need to walk to stay connected to the earth and continue a presence beneath the desperate mentalities surrounding me driven by schedules and their mechanical fulfillments. In the cities and in our cars we have forgotten we are simply nature.

Lonliness, continued from page 5

when the capitalist economy is tumbling down. If you've ever been unemployed for months, you know what that does to your general self-confidence. And when you're unconfident you get nervous when you approach an attractive person; you talk and act abruptly and mechanically. That makes you feel clumsy and

ANIMAL LIBERATION NEWS

In eastern Tennessee, a county stockyard was burned to the ground by the Animal Liberation Front in July. The remains of the structure and a computer room were razed, and damage was estimated at $100,000. Arson attacks on the meat industry have also been reported in Wisconsin and lower level attacks on animal killers have been reported in several states this year.

This summer, the federal grand jury in Grand Rapids, Michigan, charged Native American Rod Coronado in absentia with several counts stemming from a February 1992 ALF raid on Michigan State University's fur farm research program. Coronado, an ALF spokesperson, has eluded capture by federal agents since May 1992.

The Animal Liberation Front consists of non-centralized units which seek to save animals by directly liberating them from abusive conditions or by destroying the property of animal abusers. ALF units are small groups of friends who trust one another and work in secrecy. They carry out direct action using methods which range from glueing locks and painting slogans to burning meat vans and buildings and liberating animals from slaughterhouses, fur farms, and labs.

Redesigned Billboard -- Berkeley, CA

The question is now: Is politics itself part of the problem? Is politics simply the area of human activity dealing with forms of social organization, or is it an organized, alienated form of social activity? Well, when has politics ever been about anything other than organizing people to go out and fight for a cause instead of focusing their attention on their dissatisfaction with their own lives? Isn't the

Veganism:

Recently, it seems like more and more people are becoming vegans, especially young people. A vegan is someone who is not only a vegetarian, but also will not eat, consume, or wear any animal products, including milk, eggs, and leather. The reasons people give for the vegan lifestyle usually have to do primarily with concern for the animals that are being forced to lead incredibly tortuous lives. Remember: the meat and dairy industry are the same industry! After the animals are violated for all that they can give, they are brutally slaughtered and consumed. By continuing to buy dairy products lacto-ovo-vegetarians still support this system! Other reasons vegans commonly give are concern for the environment and one's own health. It is becoming so popular in the punk and underground community that some people have labeled it a "trend", but hey, isn't meat-eating even a bigger trend?

The vegan movement has served to make lacto-ovo-vegetarianism appear a much less radical dietary option than ever before. Many of those who became vegetarians years ago can remember facing a lot of resistance and hostility from society regarding our choice. Now, vegetarianism has begun to force its way into mainstream culture: witness the glossy magazines and over-priced gourmet food. In the Bay Area, for example, not only is vegetarianism ceasing to be viewed as unusual, in certain communities it is becoming the norm.

What is exciting about the recent rise of veganism is the fact that it is growing in such a vibrant way. Vegan zines are appearing, such as Raggedy Anarchy's Guide to Vegan Baking; Soy, Not Oi; Amnesty; and the Militant Vegan, among others. There has been a dramatic rise of militancy in the movement, as seen in the actions of the ALF and other radical activists, with billboards being redesigned, hunts being sabotaged, and even direct attacks against animal abusers becoming more and more commonplace. Some of the most vocal proponents of the vegan diet and ethic are punk rockers, especially Anarcho-punks and straight-edgers, with their desires to spread the scope of equality to all animals and end all

THE A.L.F. STRIKES AGAIN!

We received an anonymous letter in the mail with the following communique:

"GREETINGS FELLOW ACTIVISTS,

The Animal Liberation Front, Golden Gate Unit, claims:

March 26: Oakland. Butcher shop spraypainted.

May 26: San Francisco. 3 chicken restaurants, 2 butchers, and 2 leather shops had slogans painted and locks glued shut.

mid-June: San Francisco. 3 Fur shops had locks glued.

July 9: Albany. A KFC had all its locks glued, slogans painted on 3 walls and all windows etched with acid.

July 16: San Francisco. City Meats (sells veal) had its front lock glued and slogans painted. A Burger King had its front lock glued.

July 31: San Francisco. 2 trucks at Robert's corned beef had all locks glued and slogans painted all over them. At United Meats, a back fence was cut through and 3 trucks had all locks glued and slogans painted such as 'Meat is Murder.'

WE FIGHT FOR THE ANIMALS!

license, having to have a picture ID. I rarely experience traffic jams, rarely rode on freeways, rarely felt the mechanized rhythms of internal combustion surrounding and permeating my body physically. I withdrew from primary participation in a need for oil and its complicity with wars for oil control. I needed less steel in my life.

Although I rarely got out to the "country" or saw other places, I learned about growing community. I stayed in touch with the nature imprisoned like myself in the city, and kept close to the earth, though separated from it by cement and asphalt and the rectangularity of windows, roads, and buildings. Now I find I need to walk to stay connected to the earth and continue a presence beneath the desperate mentalities surrounding me driven by schedules and their mechanical fulfillments. In the cities and in our cars we have forgotten we are simply nature.

Lonliness, continued from page 5

when the capitalist economy is tumbling down. If you've ever been unemployed for months, you know what that does to your general self-confidence. And when you're unconfident you get nervous when you approach an attractive person; you talk and act abruptly and mechanically. That makes you feel clumsy and unappealing, so you really get emotionally debilitated. Add to all this that when you've got a low income, you're less healthy than usual; you don't feel as alive and your eyes look dead, so you're even less enticing. Everything feeds back into everything else, and around it goes again.

And in lean times, it's harder for people to afford their own apartments and rooms that provide sexual privacy. Young people well into their twenties are increasingly having to live at home with their parents to make ends meet. Now that's a tragedy, because privacy and the spontaneity it allows for are absolutely necessary for sexual happiness.

Love Me, You Assholes!

Have you ever noticed how it looks like everyone has either a better or worse social life than you, but nobody has it the same as you? (God, I wish I had a gorgeous lover like X has; well, at least I'm not a total nerd like Y!) You can spend yeras getting worn out and hard-bitten by feeling inferior and superior to others. This leads to the common catastrophe

The Animal Liberation Front consists of non-centralized units which seek to save animals by directly liberating them from abusive conditions or by destroying the property of animal abusers. ALF units are small groups of friends who trust one another and work in secrecy. They carry out direct action using methods which range from glueing locks and painting slogans to burning meat vans and buildings and liberating animals from slaughterhouses, fur farms, and labs.

Redesigned Billboard -- Berkeley, CA

The question is now: Is politics itself part of the problem? Is politics simply the area of human activity dealing with forms of social organization, or is it an organized, alienated form of social activity? Well, when has politics ever been about anything other than organizing people to go out and fight for a cause instead of focusing their attention on their dissatisfaction with their own lives? Isn't the political message always "You on't count as much as other people--what are you personal problems compared with those who are truly suffering?"

Even when political activists discuss personal life, they leave out the most subjective matters. For example, when you read their leaflets and publications, you'd think human sexual experience consists solely of abortion, AIDS, rape, and homophobia. What about sexual dissatisfaction, the itch you can't scratch?

Consider a woman getting ready to go out by herself on a Saturday night. To the activist her only concern is not getting mugged or raped. But isn't it possible that her train of thought could include, "Well, I hope I get home safely after the movie, because I'll be coming home alone tonight. I'll definitely be alone tonight. I sure wanted this weekend to be better than last weekend, but it didn't happen. I feel stuck, and I'm tired of this. Some choice--I could stay home and be lonely and safe or go out and be lonely and unsafe?"

Both the "politically correct" creeps and the punk and underground community that some people have labeled it a "trend", but hey, isn't meat-eating even a bigger trend?

The vegan movement has served to make lacto-ovo-vegetarianism appear a much less radical dietary option than ever before. Many of those who became vegetarians years ago can remember facing a lot of resistance and hostility from society regarding out choice. Now, vegetarianism has begun to force its way into mainstream culture: witness the glossy magazines and over-priced gourmet food. In the Bay Area, for example, not only is vegetarianism ceasing to be viewed as unusual, in certain communities it is becoming the norm.

What is exciting about the recent rise of veganism is the fact that it is growing in such a vibrant way. Vegan zines are appearing, such as Raggedy Anarchy's Guide to Vegan Baking; Soy, Not Oi; Amnesty; and the Militant Vegan, among others. There has been a dramatic rise of militancy in the movement, as seen in the actions of the ALF and other radical activists, with billboards being redesigned, hunts being sabotaged, and even direct attacks against animal abusers becoming more and more commonplace. Some of the most vocal proponents of the vegan diet and ethic are punk rockers, especially Anarcho-punks and straight-edgers, with their desires to spread the scope of equality to all animals and end all forms of exploitation. Young people are increasingly seeking new ways to challenge our culture of consumption and death. Veganism is emerging as an integral component of that resistance, by helping to destroy the meat and dairy industry!

Organic Radicals

continued from page 5

worst white males are the hippy, tofu eating, new age guys, with love written on their Volkswagon vans. They can hide. When they behave offensively and you let them know about it, they tell you to 'look at your anger, your feelings, you should just love everybody, peace to everyone'."

Later on during the day of the planting, Food Not Bombs served an excellent curry from India Joze, four flats of strawberries and several cakes from a healthfood bakery. Lunch has a way of swelling a crowd of a couple dozen to a couple hundred. I wallowed in a slice of three-tiered chocolate raspberry cake.

A squad car appeared at the end of the day

AGAIN!

We received an anonymous letter in the mail with the following communiqué:

"GREETINGS FELLOW ACTIVISTS,

The Animal Liberation Front, Golden Gate Unit, claims:

March 26: Oakland. Butcher shop spraypainted.

May 26: San Francisco. 3 chicken restaurants, 2 butchers, and 2 leather shops had slogans painted and locks glued shut.

mid-June: San Francisco. 3 Fur shops had locks glued.

July 9: Albany. A KFC had all its locks glued, slogans painted on 3 walls and all windows etched with acid.

July 16: San Francisco. City Meats (sells veal) had its front lock glued and slogans painted. A Burger King had its front lock glued.

July 31: San Francisco. 2 trucks at Robert's corned beef had all locks glued and slogans painted all over them. At United Meats, a back fence was cut through and 3 trucks had all locks glued and slogans painted such as 'Meat is Murder.'

WE FIGHT FOR THE ANIMALS!"

At the point of signing a lease, it is time to start an encampment on the land, regardless of the city's zoning policies and the camping ban.

The site upon which we gardened was an encampment in July of 1992. About 25 people slept there, with two free meals served each day. Caltrans finally evicted us after four days, arresting six people. A free meal has been served every Sunday since and one pavilion was built and destroyed within a few days.

I see the struggle at River and Josephine in the context of a larger struggle to reclaim the earth as a place available for all to live and work. When I dig the ground I am in solidarity with the homeless and punk squatters and pirate gardeners of Amsterdam, London, you don't feel as alive and your eyes look dead, so you're even less enticing. Everything feeds back into everything else, and around it goes again.

And in lean times, it's harder for people to afford their own apartments and rooms that provide sexual privacy. Young people well into their twenties are increasingly having to live at home with their parents to make ends meet. Now that's a tragedy, because privacy and the spontaneity it allows for are absolutely necessary for sexual happiness.

Love Me, You Assholes!

Have you ever noticed how it looks like everyone has either a better or worse social life than you, but nobody has it the same as you? (God, I wish I had a gorgeous lover like X has; well, at least I'm not a total nerd like Y!) You can spend years getting worn out and hard-bitten by feeling inferior and superior to others. This leads to the common catastrophe of misanthropy: becoming so defensive and armored against a cold world that nobody feels like approaching and connecting with you, which leaves you even more alone. Eventually you feel like shouting at the world, "Please love me, somebody--and fuck you all for not loving me!"

Politics as a Social Disease

How does loneliness fit in with the social-change movements of our time--the Left, feminism, and gay activism? It doesn't, because it's not an "issue"; it doesn't fit into the framework of politics. Although the big slogan of these movements is "the personal is political," the most personal part of everyone's life, the isolation he or she feels during every day, gets ignored. It's overlooked because these ideologies, like all ideologies, are moralistic belief systems: some group is always right and another is always wrong. Because loneliness isn't anybody's fault--there are no villains and victims--it's seen as an individual problem. (Although the more advanced ideologues, who see it as a widespread problem, mumble vaguely about "the alienation inherent in capitalist society.") And if there's no one to blame, there's no one to "support" by propagandizing them into resenting their "oppressors."

problems compared with those who are truly suffering?"

Even when political activists discuss personal life, they leave out the most subjective matters. For example, when you read their leaflets and publications, you'd think human sexual experience consists solely of abortion, AIDS, rape, and homophobia. What about sexual dissatisfaction, the itch you can't scratch?

Consider a woman getting ready to go out by herself on a Saturday night. To the activist her only concern is not getting mugged or raped. But isn't it possible that her train of thought could include, "Well, I hope I get home safely after the movie, because I'll be coming home alone tonight. I'll definitely be alone tonight. I sure wanted this weekend to be better than last weekend, but it didn't happen. I feel stuck, and I'm tired of this. Some choice--I could stay home and be lonely and safe or go out and be lonely and unsafe?"

Both the "politically correct" creeps and the anti-P.C. screamers have no idea that politics itself is always "incorrect." Politics--whether reformist whining or militant raving--is the ass-backward, ideological falsification of the human project: the collective transformation of social life. The capitalist city is basically a human being dispersal system where commodities and money come together and reproduce while people distrust and repel each other. Only a new social movement that consciously unites individuals suffocating from isolation has any chance of dissolving all forms of political domination.

Shake Some Action

Loneliness is not some eternal human condition--it's an inhuman condition in an inhuman world, the daily outcome of an anti-social society. Although loneliness and pain are a part of life--since every relationship has a beginning, it has an end--there doesn't have to be so much aloneness. The destruction of the system of isolation and the overcoming of our individual isolation from one another are seeking each other in every workplace, in every living room, and on every street corner.

The Social Club

2140 Shattuck Avenue, Box 2200
Berkeley CA, 94704

emerging as an integral component of that resistance, by helping to destroy the meat and dairy industry!

Organic Radicals

continued from page 5

worst white males are the hippy, tofu eating, new age guys, with love written on their Volkswagon vans. They can hide. When they behave offensively and you let them know about it, they tell you to 'look at your anger, your feelings, you should just love everybody, peace to everyone'."

Later on during the day of the planting, Food Not Bombs served an excellent curry from India Joze, four flats of strawberries and several cakes from a healthfood bakery. Lunch has a way of swelling a crowd of a couple dozen to a couple hundred. I wallowed in a slice of three-tiered chocolate raspberry cake.

A squad car appeared at the end of the day while about five of us put the finishing touches on a compost heap. Without venturing from his shiny racing-striped vehicle, the police officer demanded that we leave, citing an owner complaint.

Craig said we had just finished and were about to leave, but Linda got up and started yelling at him "Caltrans complained on Sunday? They're still in bed at home. We don't have to go anywhere." I was busy taking pictures of the cop who was the only opposition to the action all day. An action just does not have that radical vie essentiel if the cops stay away, and I had to catch this moment on film. He looked perturbed, said something into his radio and did a U-turn, never to be seen again. We later heard that he went to all the neighbors and asked whether they wanted to complain that people were on their property. One communal household told him off "It's not our property."

A couple weeks later, two representatives of Caltrans came to the garden in order to explore the possibility of giving us a lease for a dollar a year. If they offered, I would support signing the lease and throwing a victory party, but once we have our garden in, we need shelter. We will not be incorporated into the system and sit on our laurels. "Assimilate my Fist" as the bumper-sticker rightly points out.

At the point of signing a lease, it is time to start an encampment on the land, regardless of the city's zoning policies and the camping ban.

The site upon which we gardened was an encampment in July of 1992. About 25 people slept there, with two free meals served each day. Caltrans finally evicted us after four days, arresting six people. A free meal has been served every Sunday since and one pavilion was built and destroyed within a few days.

I see the struggle at River and Josephine in the context of a larger struggle to reclaim the earth as a place available for all to live and work. When I dig the ground I am in solidarity with the homeless and punk squatters and pirate gardeners of Amsterdam, London, Berlin, Nairobi and New York. When the local homeless talk to me I hear the demand for a Chicano/a homeland and the retention of indigenous land and culture in the Black Hills, Newe Segobia and Aoteroa. I know the landless hunger in Latin America. I am inspired by the revolutions of Africa and the thoughts of Filipino peasants. The few dozen at River and Josephine are pebbles on a mountain. We are everywhere.

The garden yielded a summer crop of beans, corn, lettuce, basil, squash, tons of tomatoes, potatoes yet to come, broccoli, bell peppers, endives, mustard greens, and cucumbers. A fall crop got planted a few weeks ago which included peas and onions. We haven't heard from the State or the cops for a long time, and I hope it stays that way. As the Dutch Kabouters said in 1970, be a toadstool on the rotting tree-trunk of government.

People are invited to join in the weekly garden parties, catered by Food Not Bombs, every Sunday at 1:00pm, across the street from Stapleton's health-food store at the juncture of River and Josephine streets in Santa Cruz. Donations of starts, seeds, and composted manure are welcome. If you want more information about O.U.R. Garden, call Food Not Bombs Santa Cruz at (408) 425-3345.

Alternative Press

Review

Aim Your Dick #2 Summer 93 $1.50

Photocopy

The second edition is another naked, eclectic mix of informative culture clips, critical commentary and emotional zing. AYD is refreshing because it is two women expressing their views raw and truthful. What it lacks in critical thought it makes up for in fresh perspective. The cover of #2 begs for comment. How can a zine that inside expresses anti-racist, ant-sexist, "don't-classify-me" attitude print "Have you kicked a hippie today on their front cover? I figure it must be for me to point out the obvious idiocy of promoting pigeonholing and discrimination among the edge of people fighting for the right of individual and free expression. "Pushing buttons" this zine is not afraid of! Their articles include: Being Pro Abortion, Environmental Racism, Confronting Gangsta Rap, "there are no such things as oriental sex secrets", Marike's Grandma, Dramatic real life account of a Dead show, and Bible Study for Anarchists. The original graphics are good, the annotated reprints intriguing and the from the heart frankness makes Aim You Dick an important voice for women's views. PO Box 4655/ Berkeley CA 94704

Bicycle Terrorist #1/ $1

photocopy

This is a "hell raisen" zine from critical mass bike ride hell. A lot of rants, anti-car

Network put out by people at the 56A Infoshop in London. A good anti-authoritarian European news source. A heavy focus on prisoners/prisons, info on McLibel (a group of anarchists being sued by McDonalds), the Maastricht treaty explained, Act-up in Berlin, strikes and action.

56a Infoshop, 56 Crampton St., London SE17 UK

Free Travel Resource Summer 93/#1/Free

This is an attempt at looking at cheap and fun ways to travel, being able to hook up with people on the road, and info on different un/cool places. Tales and experiences from the author Jess who has sorted been floating around Europe and the US. This is a pretty useful and realistic zine about cheap travel as the negative side about cheap travel comes through (like trying to get rides from flakey deadheads). Hitchhiking, dumpster diving and a small bit on race, gender, and sexuality relating to travel. A sloppy but useful guide. Jess A/109 NE Byron/ Corvallis OR 97330

Fall 1993 • Berkeley, California • Slingshot • Page 13

Hag #3/$2.50

Anarcha-fem rag of anti-authority and nonconformity. Excellent stuff on ecology, sexuality, race, gender and revolution. And more. Read it!

c/o Orissa Spire/ #D-56 1720 Douglass St./ Victoria BC/ Canada V8W 2G7

Incendiary Devices #4/send buck for postage thick-photocopied

Pissed off anti-authoritarian zine out of Seattle. A lot on prisoners/prisons, squatting, homeless, Depo-provera, child sexual abuse, non/violence debate, militant anti-racism and more. Fuck yeah!

PO Box 22774/ Seattle, WA 98122

Panic #1/$3.50

The computer design of this zine made me not want to look at it. But I took a peak and was grabbed by the intelligence of the articles not to mention some really cool artwork. Two excellent articles, one having to do with bumpersticker ideology and another about reclaiming the city called "When there is No There There" are great reads. Also an interview with the Brown Fellini's, the racist NY police riot, an Eldridge Cleaver reprint, and more. This was a breath of fresh air from the usual political bantering with a somewhat idealistic edge to it. The spirit of this is "to challenge mental constructs" and "temper with expectations". Keep the Spirit. Get this! c/o Dave Wells, 431 40th St. #5/Oakland, CA 94609

Slam #5/$2

newsprint

This is the first issue of this zine I've seen and I'm impressed. Includes news and commentary, articles on Mumia Abu-Jamal, "The right to Love the right to Kill", letter from prison. Music, Culture and opinion from the underground.

PO Box 4809/ Alexandria, VA 22303

Turning The Tide Vol 6, No.#5-6/$2

RESOURCE LIST

Action Girl #5/SASE

This is a four page newsletter of zine reviews, mostly in the riot grrrl milieu. About a 100 contacts here.

Sarah/543 Van Duzer St./ Staten Island, NY 10304

Bay Area Progressive Calendar--SASE

This is a great place to hook into political events, actions, demos... that are happening in the Bay Area. This is a great resource that should be utilized more.

Ken Cheetham/ PO Box 11232/ Berkeley, CA 94701

(510) 848-9862 ext 3 (fax ext 4) computer mail cheetham@igc.org

Bay Area Progressive Directory--$3

This is a thick guide with listings of 100's of progressive organizations in the Bay Area. Extremely useful for activists and/or for finding out where to contact different groups. (same as above)

Factsheet 5 #48/$6

If you've never heard of this, FS5 is one of the best guides to the underground/alternative media. Tons of reviews of zines and publications. Covers the spectrum of publication orientations from sex to politics to humor to comics to a lot more.

S. Freidman, Box 17099 SF CA 94117

Queer zine explosion #7/2 stamps

Hundreds of listings of (you guessed it) queer oriented zines. Great resource.

Larry-Bob/Box 591275/ SF CA 94159

perspective. The cover of #2 begs for comment. How can a zine that inside expresses anti-racist, ant-sexist, "don't-classify-me" attitude print "Have you kicked a hippie today on their front cover? I figure it must be for me to point out the obvious idiocy of promoting pigeonholing and discrimination among the edge of people fighting for the right of individual and free expression. "Pushing buttons" this zine is not afraid of! Their articles include: Being Pro Abortion, Environmental Racism, Confronting Gangsta Rap, "there are no such things as oriental sex secrets", Marike's Grandma, Dramatic real life account of a Dead show, and Bible Study for Anarchists. The original graphics are good, the annotated reprints intriguing and the from the heart frankness makes Aim You Dick an important voice for women's views.
PO Box 4655/ Berkeley CA 94704

Bicycle Terrorist #1/ $1

photocopy

This is a "hell raisen" zine from critical mass bike ride hell. A lot of rants, anti-car propaganda, BLA (Bicycle Liberation Army) article. A laugh riot. Bike extremism with a happy face. This should help loosen up the conservative tendencies of the growing critical mass bike movement.

J. Meggs, Box 15071, Berkeley, CA 94701

Contra-Flow Sept. 93/free

22 pages-photocopy

This is a publication of the European Counter

Free Travel Resource Summer 93/#1/Free

This is an attempt at looking at cheap and fun ways to travel, being able to hook up with people on the road, and info on different un/cool places. Tales and experiences from the author Jess who has sorted been floating around Europe and the US. This is a pretty useful and realistic zine about cheap travel as the negative side about cheap travel comes through (like trying to get rides from flakey deadheads). Hitchhiking, dumpster diving and bumpersticker ideology and another about reclaiming the city called "When there is No There There" are great reads. Also an interview with the Brown Fellini's, the racist NY police riot, an Eldridge Cleaver reprint, and more. This was a breath of fresh air from the usual political bantering with a somewhat idealistic edge to it. The spirit of this is "to challenge mental constructs" and "temper with expectations". Keep the Spirit. Get this!

c/o Dave Wells, 431 40th St. #5/Oakland, CA 94609

Slam #5/$2

newsprint

This is the first issue of this zine I've seen and I'm impressed. Includes news and commentary, articles on Mumia Abu-Jamal, "The right to Love the right to Kill", letter from prison. Music, Culture and opinion from the underground.

PO Box 4809/ Alexandria, VA 22303

Turning The Tide Vol 6, No.#5-6/$2

newsprint-24 pages

Just got this thick issue and haven't had the time to digest it all. Put out by a group called PART (People Against Racial Terror) that is a pro-active anti-racist organization. The cover story deals with Hawaiian Sovereignty and other articles focus on right-wing activity, news on hate crimes, police racism, and more. Good source for news and intelligent anti-racist analysis Recommended.

PART/PO Box 1990/ Burbank, CA 91507

(same as above)

Factsheet 5 #48/$6

If you've never heard of this, FS5 is one of the best guides to the underground/alternative media. Tons of reviews of zines and publications. Covers the spectrum of publication orientations from sex to politics to humor to comics to a lot more.

S. Freidman, Box 17099 SF CA 94117

Queer zine explosion #7/2 stamps

Hundreds of listings of (you guessed it) queer oriented zines. Great resource.

Larry-Bob/Box 591275/ SF CA 94159

THE LIST $1 or SASE

The list has been around awhile and its the definite guide to upcoming music shows in the Bay Area. Mostly alternative/punk listings. The spirit of this is hella cool.

PO Box 2451, Richmond, CA 94802

Earth First! Rendezvous Report

The Earth First! annual Rendezvous was held at 10,000 feet on top of Mount Graham in southern Arizona. About 300-400 people attended throughout the week of June 27 to July 4.

A major theme of this years' Rendezvous and relevant to the site location is a move within Earth First! to align more closely with Native Americans and Native American political issues. Mt. Graham is a traditional sacred site for the indigenous Apache, so a major focus of the week was support for folksongs sung around many of the nightly campfires.

The push towards Native American solidarity is hopefully a sign that Earth First! is moving away from the 'save the wilderness for white people' camp, though continued harping on the "over-population problem" with its racist, classist and nationalist overtones was still disturbingly present. The movement remains predominantly middle-class, single issue, and deep ecology continues to be the dominant political tendency. However, there is

Detroit Summer

"Get Off Your Ass and Move!"

This my second year with the Detroit Summer movement. We are a small band of committed activists from Detroit and around the country. Our Slogan is, "Detroit Summer '93, A Multicultural, Intergenerational Youth Movement To ReBuild, ReDefine, and ReSpirit Detroit FROM THE GROUND UP!" Like any movement, ours is full of contradictions; however, I feel that is wrong to throw in the towel and give up and become cynical. This has been a growing experience.

Former gang members from Fresno, California, who have survival skills that I hope to never have, have taught me to be more open minded. Their experiences in Detroit have then my influence would have been nil. Detroit Summer is a part of a growing movement to grapple with the issues we are confronted with today. Questions on how to start resolving racism, sexism, homophobia, classism and de-urbanization are being looked at in a new light by young people who aren't jaded with the dogmatics of ideology. Creating a new and radical movement for social and ecological justice within the inner city has proved a very fruitful experiment. We are literally planting the seeds for a new economy with our neighborhood community gardens, greenhouses, rehabbed houses, murals and other art projects as we struggle through happy face. This should help loosen up the conservative tendencies of the growing critical mass bike movement.

J. Meggs, Box 15071, Berkeley, CA 94701

Contra-Flow Sept. 93/free
22 pages-photocopy
This is a publication of the European Counter

PART (People Against Racial Terror) that is a pro-active anti-racist organization. The cover story deals with Hawaiian Sovereignty and other articles focus on right-wing activity, news on hate crimes, police racism, and more. Good source for news and intelligent anti-racist analysis Recommended.
PART/PO Box 1990/ Burbank, CA 91507

THE LIST $1 or SASE

The list has been around awhile and its the definite guide to upcoming music shows in the Bay Area. Mostly alternative/punk listings. The spirit of this is hella cool.
PO Box 2451, Richmond, CA 94802

Earth First! Rendezvous Report

The Earth First! annual Rendezvous was held at 10,000 feet on top of Mount Graham in southern Arizona. About 300-400 people attended throughout the week of June 27 to July 4.

A major theme of this years' Rendezvous and relevant to the site location is a move within Earth First! to align more closely with Native Americans and Native American political issues. Mt. Graham is a traditional sacred site for the indigenous Apache, so a major focus of the week was support for Apache self-determination of the mountain. Specifically this meant uniting around opposition to two huge telescopes being built on top of the mountain, a joint project of the University of Arizona and the Vatican (they want to try and see God, no joke).

Worth mention was a strong anarchist presence at the gathering including a whole camping area, the "No Borders" camp. In addition, two of the four people chosen to edit the Earth First! Journal this year identify with the anarchist milieu.

The gathering was very well organized by Arizona Earth First!, with a loose and participatory structure. There were general meetings every morning at 9 A.M. and then the rest of the day was open to whoever wanted to sign up to do workshops. There were workshops on a broad array of subjects. The Earth First! movement appears to be growing, broadening its scope, and becoming increasingly militant, at least in spirit, as evidenced by the new slew of rowdy ecotage folksongs sung around many of the nightly campfires.

The push towards Native American solidarity is hopefully a sign that Earth First! is moving away from the 'save the wilderness for white people' camp, though continued harping on the "over-population problem" with its racist, classist and nationalist overtones was still disturbingly present. The movement remains predominantly middle-class, single issue, and deep ecology continues to be the dominant political tendency. However, there is a growing anarchist influence, mostly of young people who won't be going away anytime soon.

Highlights of the week: the harmonious community of people that was created in the context of nature; the unChristian-like nature of the big fire circles where many of the revelers had a hard time keeping their clothes on once the drum rhythms picked up; and the action at the University of Arizona the day after the gathering which brought the administration building to a standstill with the combination of an Earth First! style occupation and clamp down inside the building and anarchist anti-police chaos outside the building.

The Earth First! Journal has moved its headquarters to Eugene, Oregon this year. And be sure to make it to next years' Rendezvous in the southern Appalachians of Tennessee. The decentralized nature of this movement continues to be impressive.

--N. Waters

Detroit Summer

"Get Off Your Ass and Move!"

This my second year with the Detroit Summer movement. We are a small band of committed activists from Detroit and around the country. Our Slogan is, "Detroit Summer '93, A Multicultural, Intergenerational Youth Movement To ReBuild, ReDefine, and ReSpirit Detroit FROM THE GROUND UP!" Like any movement, ours is full of contradictions; however, I feel that is wrong to throw in the towel and give up and become cynical. This has been a growing experience.

Former gang members from Fresno, California, who have survival skills that I hope to never have, have taught me to be more open minded. Their experiences in Detroit have brought home the stark reality of the inner city and what we will all be facing in the 21st century. As a youth from Santa Cruz, I came to Detroit Summer to challenge others as well as to be challenged myself. We had a meeting where we tried to define our group process. This was difficult. A few proposed real consensus as a means of radical democracy in action, which had worked for the more homogenous groups I have been involved with that have a clearer focus. It came out in the meeting that Detroit Summer people are coming from all different experiences in communication, from New England style town halls to the informal consensus we were working with, so a few new people got exposed to the ideas behind working with a radical democratic style of self-governing through consensus.

Had I simply written off Detroit Summer as just another Peace Corps venture, then my influence would have been nil. Detroit Summer is a part of a growing movement to grapple with the issues we are confronted with today. Questions on how to start resolving racism, sexism, homophobia, classism and de-urbanization are being looked at in a new light by young people who aren't jaded with the dogmatics of ideology. Creating a new and radical movement for social and ecological justice within the inner city has proved a very fruitful experiment. We are literally planting the seeds for a new economy with our neighborhood community gardens, greenhouses, rehabbed houses, murals and other art projects as we struggle through some of the groundwork. Detroit Summer's office is located in the Cass Corridor, where prostitutes and the homeless are dumped off from the surrounding areas.

One Friday night a large tree was knocked down by a tornado and a live wire caught a roof on fire as we sat on the porch waiting for the fire department for an hour. Many different races, young and old, gay and straight, socialist and anarchist, we used this time to synchronize our visions. We're now planning to fix up a huge abandoned building in the Cass Corridor to use as a community center, with solar power, a printing press, art studio, gallery, cooperative living, pirate radio, greenhouse, and free garden in place of the existing vacant lot. After Detroit Summer '94 gets this base of operations set up, we'll help others do the same with other buildings and open spaces. We need to put ideologies aside and unite to make our immediate surroundings livable.

Sasquatch

The San Francisco 'Food Not Bombs' Story

Before San Francisco

The first Food Not Bombs collective was started in Cambridge in 1981 by members of the Clamshell Alliance, organizers of mass actions against nuclear energy in New England. The collective revolved around four dogs, Jasmine, Arrow, Sage, and Yoda, along with Jasmine's three puppies, and collective members planned actions while walking the dogs. While serving free food to the hungry, they organized demonstrations around gentrification, nuclear weapons, and intervention in Central America.

Through the 1980s, as the group became stronger, Food Not Bombs provided logistical support to demonstrations across the country. As over one million people gathered in New York for the International March for Nuclear Disarmament, Food Not Bombs provided food to many demonstrators. Food Not Bombs consistently supported demonstrations at the Nevada Test Site, networking with like-minded activists from throughout the country and the world.

Golden Gate Park

By 1988, Food Not Bombs groups were started in San Francisco and Washington DC as well as Boston. The San Francisco group served food at Golden Gate Park every Monday starting in May.

In August, 1988, police started arresting those serving in Golden Gate Park. By Labor Day, 700 people assembled to protest the arrests, and 54 people were arrested. Faced with worldwide news coverage and public condemnation, San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos called a temporary moratorium on arrests of food servers.

Civic Center

In the summer of 1989, as part of a nationwide campaign of "tent cities," a large encampment was established in Civic Center

Plaza, across from City Hall. As police sought to brutally repress the encampment, Food Not Bombs began to support the tent city by serving meals in Civic Center.

On July 13, 1989, 3 people were arrested for serving food in Civic Center. The following day a large demonstration was held at which 9 more people were arrested, mostly for serving food.

Food Not Bombs continued for months to serve dinner after nightfall in Civic Center. In January, 1990, Food Not Bombs decided to assert its right to public food distribution more firmly by serving lunch every Tuesday in Civic Center. Volunteers were arrested each week until in February, the City of San Francisco allowed Park and Health permits to be issued to Food Not Bombs.

In June, Mayor Agnos announced that he would "solve" the homeless problem. While opening a multi-service center with 200 beds (San Francisco has 5000-10,000 homeless persons), Agnos ordered the clearing of the Civic Center encampment. While hundreds left Civic Center before the deadline, police arriving on the morning of July 6, 1990 evicted about 80 people and their belongings.

After the Fall

The homeless problem "solved," the city revoked permits for Food Not Bombs, claiming that food service was inappropriate and no longer necessary in city parks. Food Not Bombs continued to serve, however. During the Gulf War, Food Not Bombs established a 24 hour vigil in Civic Center, and service was permanently expanded to include lunch every day as well as dinner. Also in the period from 1991-1992, Food Not Bombs groups started all over California. Arrests of Food Not Bombs members have been sporadic and rare since then, until the current crackdown.

--Stephen

Chronology of recent crack-down on FNB

Thursday: September 2: Lunchtime: Police come to Food Not Bombs lunch at Civic Center and tell volunteers they will be arrested and their vehicle impounded if they attempt to serve any more meals.

Thursday: September 2: Dinnertime: Police return and arrest 12 volunteers for serving food.

Friday: September 3: More people are arrested at lunch. At dinner, a van belonging to Food Not Bombs is impounded along with six arrests. Members of San Francisco, East Bay, Santa Cruz and Sacramento Food Not Bombs are arrested.

Saturday: September 4: Over one hundred people come to support the Food Not Bombs dinner; police observe but make no arrests.

Tuesday: September 7: Police resume arrests of food servers at every meal.

Wednesday: September 8: Over 200 people gather at Civic Center to protest the Matrix Program and the arrests of Food Not Bombs, during the opening night of the San Francisco Opera. No arrests are made.

Thursday: September 9: Six more are arrested including members of AYUDA, a latino homeless organization, and another vehicle is impounded.

Friday: September 10: While two are arrested, a third volunteer jumps in the Civic Center fountain. Refusing to wade in the pool, police wait for a half hour then leave.

September 11--Present: Arrests of Food Not Bombs members continue almost every day, especially at weekday lunches in Civic Center.

Wednesday: September 15: Another large rally is held at lunchtime in Civic Center. Four people are arrested for serving food.

Tuesday: September 28: Three priests are arrested for serving food in Civic Center.

Wednesday: September 29: Over 200 people gather again in Civic Center. About 35 people are arrested in connection with food distribution.

Wednesday: October 6: Activists, including Food Not Bombs, attempt a sleep-in at Mayor Jordan's house. About 20 are arrested.

Food Not Bombs

gentrification, nuclear weapons, and intervention in Central America.

Through the 1980s, as the group became stronger, Food Not Bombs provided logistical support to demonstrations across the country. As over one million people gathered in New York for the International March for Nuclear Disarmament, Food Not Bombs provided food to many demonstrators. Food Not Bombs consistently supported demonstrations at the Nevada Test Site, networking with like-minded activists from throughout the country and the world.

Golden Gate Park

By 1988, Food Not Bombs groups were started in San Francisco and Washington DC as well as Boston. The San Francisco group served food at Golden Gate Park every Monday starting in May.

In August, 1988, police started arresting those serving in Golden Gate Park. By Labor Day, 700 people assembled to protest the arrests, and 54 people were arrested. Faced with worldwide news coverage and public condemnation, San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos called a temporary moratorium on arrests of food servers.

Civic Center

In the summer of 1989, as part of a nationwide campaign of "tent cities," a large encampment was established in Civic Center

January, 1990, Food Not Bombs decided to assert its right to public food distribution more firmly by serving lunch every Tuesday in Civic Center. Volunteers were arrested each week until in February, the City of San Francisco allowed Park and Health permits to be issued to Food Not Bombs.

In June, Mayor Agnos announced that he would "solve" the homeless problem. While opening a multi-service center with 200 beds (San Francisco has 5000-10,000 homeless persons), Agnos ordered the clearing of the Civic Center encampment. While hundreds left Civic Center before the deadline, police arriving on the morning of July 6, 1990 evicted about 80 people and their belongings.

After the Fall

The homeless problem "solved," the city revoked permits for Food Not Bombs, claiming that food service was inappropriate and no longer necessary in city parks. Food Not Bombs continued to serve, however. During the Gulf War, Food Not Bombs established a 24 hour vigil in Civic Center, and service was permanently expanded to include lunch every day as well as dinner. Also in the period from 1991-1992, Food Not Bombs groups started all over California. Arrests of Food Not Bombs members have been sporadic and rare since then, until the current crackdown.

--Stephen

Matrix

continued from page 1

and tourist industries (the primary backers of campaigns against poor and homeless people in San Francisco) while maintaining the city's liberal reputation. Under Frank Jordan, there is no pretense of compassion, only repression, as San Francisco swings in line with Pete Wilson and other right-wing politicians in California, on issues like welfare and immigration as well as homelessness.

Failing to do anything positive, Frank Jordan faces record low opinion polls. Like all fascist projects, his attacks on homeless people, immigrants, and welfare recipients aim to increase his popularity as people identify with his message of hate and can blame the city's problems on targeted groups.

Total War on the Poor

As mechanization and exportation of labor-intensive industries are increased, a large pushing down on the poor in many ways.

Attacks on Immigrants: Gets rid of unwanted people who can simply be kicked out. San Francisco is modifying its sanctuary law so that persons charged with felonies can be reported to the INS. They must merely be charged; people who are deported cannot challenge the charge or sue for false arrest. Hysteria against all Latino immigrants is drastically rising in California and at the federal level.

Attacks on Welfare: Jordan has proposed Proposition V, which requires fingerprinting of General Assistance recipients. This effort is fueled by anti-welfare campaigns at the state level, as Governor Wilson fights to drastically lower many forms of welfare. In the new California, there will be no options for those who don't have enough.

Real Estate: If you're not useful to them they have no reason to house you. rents and real-estate profits sky-rocket.

Elimination of Alternative Lifestyles: All the

September 11--Present: Arrests of Food Not Bombs members continue almost every day, especially at weekday lunches in Civic Center.

Wednesday: September 15: Another large rally is held at lunchtime in Civic Center. Four people are arrested for serving food.

Tuesday: September 28: Three priests are arrested for serving food in Civic Center.

Wednesday: September 29: Over 200 people gather again in Civic Center. About 35 people are arrested in connection with food distribution.

Wednesday: October 6: Activists, including Food Not Bombs, attempt a sleep-in at Mayor Jordan's house. About 20 are arrested.

Food Not Bombs

continued from page 1

riot police and ended with 20 arrests. The day to day events are fun. Several volunteers have been arrested serving from the fountain which was flooded with water to discourage people from sleeping in it. Santa was arrested, nuns and priests have been arrested along with business men and the hungry. Several people reported a man not connected with Food Not Bombs was arrested when he gave away blankets. This man said he spent two days in jail and paid a $350 fine to get out. Food Not Bombs is encouraging other groups to choose one lunch a month or week and come out and risk arrest at City Hall.

Food Not Bombs continues to serve generally on its same schedule. Sometimes a heavy police presence will delay the meal. But we have figured out how to sneak soup and bread into the park. Food Not Bombs has also been discussing its position in regards to the new martial law and has consensued to meeting people felt like community support is strong enough to end the attacks without losing any of our basic rights.

Micro-power FM radio stations have joined in the action by airing calls for action and providing uncensored information on the public view of the war against the poor. The

continued from page 1

and tourist industries (the primary backers of campaigns against poor and homeless people in San Francisco) while maintaining the city's liberal reputation. Under Frank Jordan, there is no pretense of compassion, only repression, as San Francisco swings in line with Pete Wilson and other right-wing politicians in California, on issues like welfare and immigration as well as homelessness.

Failing to do anything positive, Frank Jordan faces record low opinion polls. Like all fascist projects, his attacks on homeless people, immigrants, and welfare recipients aim to increase his popularity as people identify with his message of hate and can blame the city's problems on targeted groups.

Total War on the Poor

As mechanization and exportation of labor-intensive industries are increased, a large portion of the working class in the United States have become unnecessary. Too many people are of no use to the system; no matter how many service jobs are created to cater to every desire and fetish of the wealthy. There's way more than enough unemployed people to keep wages very low. The system responds by people who can simply be kicked out. San Francisco is modifying its sanctuary law so that persons charged with felonies can be reported to the INS. They must merely be charged; people who are deported cannot challenge the charge or sue for false arrest. Hysteria against all Latino immigrants is drastically rising in California and at the federal level.

Attacks on Welfare: Jordan has proposed Proposition V, which requires fingerprinting of General Assistance recipients. This effort is fueled by anti-welfare campaigns at the state level, as Governor Wilson fights to drastically lower many forms of welfare. In the new California, there will be no options for those who don't have enough.

Real Estate: If you're not useful to them they have no reason to house you. rents and real-estate profits sky-rocket.

Elimination of Alternative Lifestyles: All the left out people cannot be allowed to build their own society, as it is too threatening to the dominant society. Practice of crafts and other self-employing projects by poor people are suppressed. On Telegraph Avenue, Berkeley, police crackdown on hairwrappers and other unauthorized vendors, and fees for licensed vendors skyrocket. Across society, regulation of very small businesses continues to rise. Another example, the federal FDA is planning to ban many herbal medicines and nutritional supplements, enforcing a monopoly of big-business Western medicine.

Another part of this is evidenced by the crackdown on Food Not Bombs; suppression of grassroots do it yourself solutions to social problems, precisely because they are just that.

Final Elimination: So if so many poor people are being made homeless or their lives are destroyed, and homeless people are somehow pushed further down, where do they go? A few clues are available:

*Thousands of homeless people die on streets each year.

*As pollution, malnutrition, and overcrowding saturate poor communities, many develop diseases and have no resources for treatment.

*The U.S. has over one million prisoners, a higher per capita rate than any other nation on Earth. And prison construction continues at a fantastic rate.

--Stephen

riot police and ended with 20 arrests. The day to day events are fun. Several volunteers have been arrested serving from the fountain which was flooded with water to discourage people from sleeping in it. Santa was arrested, nuns and priests have been arrested along with business men and the hungry. Several people reported a man not connected with Food Not Bombs was arrested when he gave away blankets. This man said he spent two days in jail and paid a $350 fine to get out. Food Not Bombs is encouraging other groups to choose one lunch a month or week and come out and risk arrest at City Hall.

Food Not Bombs continues to serve generally on its same schedule. Sometimes a heavy police presence will delay the meal. But we have figured out how to sneak soup and bread into the park. Food Not Bombs has also been discussing its position in regards to the new martial law and has consensued maintaining that it is our fundamental right to protest militarism by feeding the hungry and that the group will talk with the mayor when he stops the arrests. The group also supports the Board of Supervisors introducing a "Good Samaritan Law" making it unnecessary to have a permit to help the poor for free. It is crazy to ask permission to resist fascism from the same corrupt fascist whose repression you are trying to stop. At the regular Thursday night meeting people felt like community support is strong enough to end the attacks without losing any of our basic rights.

Micro-power FM radio stations have joined in the action by airing calls for action and providing uncensored information on the public's view of the war against the poor. The shows have been unlike anything on FM radio. The music is hot and the segues keep the listener tuned in. The shows include frequent announcements of future Food Not Bombs events. The Food Not Bombs Radio Network ran a special October program on fascism which aired on several micro-power stations, six high powered FM stations and on Peace Radio Internationals short wave which is heard in over 60 countries.

On Wednesday, October 27, 1993 Food Not Bombs plans another rally at City Hall at noon. Everyone is invited to risk arrest serving free food in their Halloween costume. This protest should be fun.

Food Not Bombs is encouraging people to start a group in your community. For information on starting an autonomous group please write Food Not Bombs, 3145 Geary Blvd. #12, San Francisco, CA 94118 or call 415-330-5030

Ashkenaz

Music and Dance Café

Live Calypso, Soca, Reggae, Afrobeat, So. African, Highlife,
Cajun, Zydeco, Latin, Funk, Squaredance, Int'l. folkdance

Beer, Wine, Hot Food.
Kids & Minors welcome.
Smoking in hallway only.
Security Parking provided.
Wheelchair Accessible.

Call for times & prices.

1317 San Pablo, Berkeley 94702
510-525-5054

IMMIGRATION

continued from page 3

funded groups of the far right who are attacking immigrants, people of color, welfare recipients and, by extension, any other vulnerable community.

Even groups and individuals considered vaguely progressive such as the Sierra Club, Barbara Boxer, Dianne Feinstein are opportunistically cultivating xenophobia and by doing so providing great legitimacy to scapegoating. In many ways the alliance of vigilante groups with liberals and traditional rightists mirrors the movement towards Fascism in Europe where the symbiotic relationship between these groups brought about the contemporary situation of violence and hatred.

Usually immigration is seen as the result of poverty or war, but there is often little understanding beyond that. What is seldom recognized is that what causes the poverty in the Third World is also what causes poverty here. Both proponents and opponents of NAFTA argue that the treaty will move jobs to Mexico. But what employment is created in Mexico will be far offset by livelihoods disrupted/destroyed in traditional economic sectors. Transnational agribusiness may take with it a limited number of jobs but there will be hundreds of thousands of small and medium sized producers who will be pushed off their ejidos and small farms. The same scenario applies to manufacturing, retail, secondary industry, etc. All of which is desirable for Transnational capital. There is no point in moving plants to areas with high employment rates. Who would take jobs at a dollar a day?

And what jobs will be available to the unemployed here in the US? The statistics are unequivocal. Low wage, low skilled, labor intensive and service sector jobs. Jobs perfectly suited to, and often intended for, immigrants, documented and undocumented, who usually speak little English, are considered less likely to organize and will accept low wages because of the debts incurred in migrating and the remittances needed to support those who can no longer make a living in the home country.

There is definitely a pull, then, which the rapidly polarizing US economy exerts upon people displaced in the Third World by capital migration. So the real problem for people everywhere including the US is not human migration but the capital migration which causes it.

With capital being evermore transnational in character (in the early 1980s intrafirm trade within the largest 350 transnationals accounted for 40 percent of global trade) it is increasingly able to demand and gain concessions from government at Federal, state and local levels. This is accomplished by threatening to relocate. Historically those concessions have taken the form of lower-taxes, de-regulation, greater security, etc. Coupled with reduced Federal Funding for social programs through the Carter/Reagan/Bush years, the diminished state and local tax base has translated into the annual budget crisis we are all so familiar with and which are resolved by decimating education, healthcare, homeless assistance, welfare and by funding jails and police.

So rather than place responsibility where it belongs, society is being encouraged to blame those who cannot defend themselves easily. And by bashing entirely the wrong people, society contributes to the disappearance of the services which it needs to survive.

As anarchists opposed to the state and its paternalistic welfare programs these are times to organize, to establish alternatives. Community gardens, literacy classes, technical classes, health clinics, squats, community food programs. But to do that we'll have to break from our isolation, look at our knee jerk fuck shit up attitudes, work in coalition, go door to door. Otherwise, we'll learn from first hand experience what its like to be antifascist in Europe in 1993. Afraid, isolated and overwhelmed.

Retaking abandoned HUD property in Oakland, Calif.

HOMES NOT JAILS

continued from page 3

It's great to have a group like Homes Not Jails behind you [but not necessary]."

Technical knowledge, information about how to turn on gas and electricity for example, is easily accessible. You can get it from the public library or through networking with other people involved in the squatting movement.

Homes Not Jails has three squat rules: use consensus process, no drugs, no violence.

"Consensus process is really necessary if we are going to prevent having the structures [develop within the group] which create homelessness," Anne explains. Squats with leaders fail, she says; in one squat a person took over as leader and before long started collecting rent money from the other squatters, becoming a landlord.

The no drugs rule is considered necessary for the survival of the squat. Drugs and alcohol, says Ted Gullicksen, are "the sort of things that can get a squat busted quickly." When neighbors and even police come in and observe that the squat is a home and not a expect to see a crackhouse."

Another way to increase your squat's chances of survival is to establish tenancy. Homes Not Jails recommends that squatters have a friend send them mail at the squat address as soon as they move in. If the landlord has to hire a lawyer to remove people from a vacant building which is not bringing in any money in rent anyway, your squat may be able to exist with the consent of the landlord -- at the very least, you will have more time to fight eviction.

Repairing the building also helps a squat to survive. Gaining the support of the neighbors can be as simple as improving the appearance of a rundown building and so improving their property values. Another reason why repairing the building is important, says Anne, is that it builds a sense of community among the squatters. In order for community to be built up along with the squats, it is essential that work starts on the space immediately and be an ongoing labor in which everyone is involved.

Homes Not Jails

It's great to have a group like Homes Not Jails behind you [but not necessary]."

Technical knowledge, information about how to turn on gas and electricity for example, is easily accessible. You can get it from the public library or through networking with other people involved in the squatting movement.

Homes Not Jails has three squat rules: use consensus process, no drugs, no violence.

"Consensus process is really necessary if we are going to prevent having the structures [develop within the group] which create homelessness," Anne explains. Squats with leaders fail, she says; in one squat a person took over as leader and before long started collecting rent money from the other squatters, becoming a landlord.

The no drugs rule is considered necessary for the survival of the squat. Drugs and alcohol, says Ted Gullicksen, are "the sort of things that can get a squat busted quickly." When neighbors and even police come in and observe that the squat is a home and not a crackhouse, Ted notes, they become supportive. "Every time the police have come in and then left they've been shocked to see people cooking dinner and watching TV. They

expect to see a crackhouse."

Another way to increase your squat's chances of survival is to establish tenancy. Homes Not Jails recommends that squatters have a friend send them mail at the squat address as soon as they move in. If the landlord has to hire a lawyer to remove people from a vacant building which is not bringing in any money in rent anyway, your squat may be able to exist with the consent of the landlord -- at the very least, you will have more time to fight eviction.

Repairing the building also helps a squat to survive. Gaining the support of the neighbors can be as simple as improving the appearance of a rundown building and so improving their property values. Another reason why repairing the building is important, says Anne, is that it builds a sense of community among the squatters. In order for community to be built up along with the squats, it is essential that work starts on the space immediately and be an ongoing labor in which everyone is involved.

Homes Not Jails

The meeting changes frequently. For updates on where Homes Not Jails is meeting, call the Food Not Bombs hotline (415) 330-5030 or the Tenants Union (415) 282-5525.

The Third World is also what causes poverty here. Both proponents and opponents of NAFTA argue that the treaty will move jobs to Mexico. But what employment is created in Mexico will be far offset by livelihoods disrupted/destroyed in traditional economic sectors. Transnational agribusiness may take with it a limited number of jobs but there will be hundreds of thousands of small and medium sized producers who will be pushed off their ejidos and small farms. The same scenario applies to manufacturing, retail, secondary industry, etc. All of which is desirable for Transnational capital. There is no point in moving plants to areas with high employment rates. Who would take jobs at a dollar a day?

And what jobs will be available to the unemployed here in the US? The statistics are unequivocal. Low wage, low skilled, labor intensive and service sector jobs. Jobs perfectly suited to, and often intended for, immigrants, documented and undocumented, who usually speak little English, are considered less likely to organize and will accept low wages because of the debts

Federal Funding for social programs through the Carter/Reagan/Bush years, the diminished state and local tax base has translated into the annual budget crisis we are all so familiar with and which are resolved by decimating education, healthcare, homeless assistance, welfare and by funding jails and police.

So rather than place responsibility where it belongs, society is being encouraged to blame those who cannot defend themselves easily. And by bashing entirely the wrong people, society contributes to the disappearance of the services which it needs to survive.

As anarchists opposed to the state and its paternalistic welfare programs these are times to organize, to establish alternatives. Community gardens, literacy classes, technical classes, health clinics, squats, community food programs. But to do that we'll have to break from our isolation, look at our knee jerk fuck shit up attitudes, work in coalition, go door to door. Otherwise, we'll learn from first hand experience what its like to be antifascist in Europe in 1993. Afraid, isolated and overwhelmed.

LETTERS TO SLINGSHOT Continued from Page 2

To start with, the whole labor/management dispute between the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW or "wobblies") and Miracle Mile Enterprises Corp. (doing business as the End Up started when the queer janitors there presented the management with a union contract for negotiation. This caused the management there to instigate a series of firings. All this was sparked in large part because the management there fired a janitor because he has AIDS, and therefore "couldn't" work. This man is a radical gay activist faggot, and Wobbly, and he's not me, and we as a group of queer workers were ready to stand up to this exploitation by a homo boss. The subsequent picket lines involved people who once worked at the End Up as well as other union and queer activists, wobblies and non-wobs, male and female and other, straight and gay, dyke, bisexual and transgender too. Apparently, however, Sparrow bought de facto the definitions of the situation offered by the gay bosses in the gay press. The gay press wasn't as bad actually in their coverage of our pickets as they've been known historically to be. Because guess who owns the gay papers? That's right -- gay being called, smacks of not only prejudice, but also of denial.

And that's what I attack, verbally and in print -- exploitation based on prejudice and denial. (Not to mention plain old greed.) Homos, just like many other good amerikans, are really good at denying their prejudice, especially that of class. That prejudice is what you, Sparrow, defend, even as you rage against it.

To put it country simple, that's what this whole thing is all about. I speak personally, but we acted up at the End Up as a Union, a group of workers, queer in many ways, and against the entire establishment of the exploitation system called the "gay ghetto" in San Francisco. Are you not aware of this historical implications of the very term "ghetto," Sparrow?

Unfortunately, for all your raging, Sparrow, you haven't really learned the lessons of the culture(s) you so loudly claim. You perpetuate the injustices you rage against. That's exactly the cycle we hope to break, as working class queers, at the End Up.

In Queer Love and R@ge,
and for a world without bosses,

homes, on which they had lived in essential self-sufficiency. This displacement went on for several centuries, starting in the 15th, and peaking in the 16th and 17th centuries, continuing till the 19th in Britain and the Low Countries. Involuntary displacement from the land, primarily via economic means, is still going on in Southern and Eastern Europe. Over the centuries, millions have been killed in this process, be it via executions during evictions, or starvation, disease, etc. in the aftermath.

Most of those displaced crowded into towns. There, many of them attempted to get by via begging and other marginal activity. This was made impossible via the imposition of new laws such as vagrancy. Those forcibly urbanized thus had to get jobs in order to survive, which eventually fitted perfectly with the growing need for wage workers in the newly-created factories starting in the 18th century. They worked long hours just to (barely) survive, while the owners of the factories got rich off the products of their labor. This is what lies at the nucleus of European capitalism.

By the 17th century, the system did require its fight against the mainstream colonial society is one notable case.

This exploitation has continued. Martinez talks about the opening of America to "millions of Europeans who came seeking life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." I wish she was trying to be ironic, but I failed to detect such an attitude. In reality, most of those immigrants were people displaced by the ongoing land thefts. Perhaps they came to the States with high hopes, but usually the reality was factory wage slavery, which can be even worse than open slavery in some ways. A slave is the property of a master, who thus must keep the slave alive or lose the "investment." But a wage worker is supposedly "free," i.e. on his/her own, free to sell her/his body and creative abilities to the highest bidder in return for enough money to purchase survival needs. Some immigrants wound up as independent farmers in the Midwest and West, only to lose their land to creditors via foreclosure after being squeezed by suppliers and the railroads which transported their produce. They too were channeled to the factories.

Today, most European-Americans are not members of the ruling elite. The average white

LETTERS TO SLINGSHOT Continued from Page 2

To start with, the whole labor/management dispute between the Industrial Workers of the World (IWW or "wobblies") and Miracle Mile Enterprises Corp. (doing business as the End Up started when the queer janitors there presented the management with a union contract for negotiation. This caused the management there to instigate a series of firings. All this was sparked in large part because the management there fired a janitor because he has AIDS, and therefore "couldn't" work. This man is a radical gay activist faggot, and Wobbly, and he's not me, and we as a group of queer workers were ready to stand up to this exploitation by a homo boss. The subsequent picket lines involved people who once worked at the End Up as well as other union and queer activists, wobblies and non-wobs, male and female and other, straight and gay, dyke, bisexual and transgender too. Apparently, however, Sparrow bought de facto the definitions of the situation offered by the gay bosses in the gay press. The gay press wasn't as bad actually in their coverage of our pickets as they've been known historically to be. Because guess who owns the gay papers? That's right - gay bar owners, who also own the boutiques and run the "community-based" AIDS service organizations and live in Diamond Heights and very well, thank you, and get back to work. They are the gay establishment, and Sparrow, they are not your friends either. They are your masters.

That is why we also reached out to other press outlets, such as labor and anarchist media, as well as the straight "alternative" press. Deep Dish TV has a lot of footage too. Sparrow 13's objection to such diversity gets to the heart of the problem with "quasi-separatis(m)," and goes far toward illuminating the hypocrisy Sparrow 13 so brazenly displays as righteous libertarianism. The fact of the matter is, we did not submit to discrimination at the hands of gay bosses who profit not only off that ghetto Sparrow so righteously defends in his letter, but also off the queers who work for them, for low wages and in shit conditions (just like them coal miners, only more socially tolerant, despite separatism). We also dared to break the silence about that "We're All Family." We maintain that a boss is a boss, straight or gay, and queer and straight alike can see the common interests we all share, as human fucking beings, in standing up to such exploitation based on who we are, what we do, and how much money we have. Not to see it, and indeed to call those who fight such a fight names you specifically resent being called, smacks of not only prejudice, but also of denial.

And that's what I attack, verbally and in print - exploitation based on prejudice and denial. (Not to mention plain old greed.) Homos, just like many other good amerikans, are really good at denying their prejudice, especially that of class. That prejudice is what you, Sparrow, defend, even as you rage against it.

To put it country simple, that's what this whole thing is all about. I speak personally, but we acted up at the End Up as a Union, a group of workers, queer in many ways, and against the entire establishment of the exploitation system called the "gay ghetto" in San Francisco. Are you not aware of this historical implications of the very term "ghetto," Sparrow?

Unfortunately, for all your raging, Sparrow, you haven't really learned the lessons of the culture(s) you so loudly claim. You perpetuate the injustices you rage against. That's exactly the cycle we hope to break, as working class queers, at the End Up.

In Queer Love and R@ge,
and for a world without bosses,
Deke Nihilson working-class, faggot-ass Wobbly

FIGHTING BAD HISTORY

I thought that "Fighting White Supremacy" by Sharon Martinez in Slingshot's Summer issue made good points about the way the ruling elite uses racial/ethnic divisions to screw the rest of us, no matter what color, and perpetuate its own rule. But this was in distinct contrast to the bad history which came early in the piece.

The author asserted that European capitalism was built up essentially on the theft of precious metals and land from the indigenous inhabitants of this hemisphere and the enslavement of Africans. While these were factors, they were by no means the only ones, or even the most important. It was far more a case of a system developing via its internal dynamic. This was the forceful displacement of Europe's peasants from the land. In Britain, this process took the form of "enclosure", the seizure of common land belonging to no one/everyone. Elsewhere in Europe, as well as Britain, small plots owned by peasants were likewise taken over by the owners of big estates. All this was done with the open aid of the state. The main result was the expulsion of most of the rural inhabitants from their traditional homes, on which they had lived in essential self-sufficiency. This displacement went on for several centuries, starting in the 15th, and peaking in the 16th and 17th centuries, continuing till the 19th in Britain and the Low Countries. Involuntary displacement from the land, primarily via economic means, is still going on in Southern and Eastern Europe. Over the centuries, millions have been killed in this process, be it via executions during evictions, or starvation, disease, etc. in the aftermath.

Most of those displaced crowded into towns. There, many of them attempted to get by via begging and other marginal activity. This was made impossible via the imposition of new laws such as vagrancy. Those forcibly urbanized thus had to get jobs in order to survive, which eventually fitted perfectly with the growing need for wage workers in the newly-created factories starting in the 18th century. They worked long hours just to (barely) survive, while the owners of the factories got rich off the products of their labor. This is what lies at the nucleus of European capitalism.

By the 17th century, the system did require globalization to continue its growth. Private property relations were imposed on other continents. The theft of resources and land and the enslavement of peoples fed into the already proceeding process in Europe so as to generate modern industrial capitalism. It is all still going on today, be it in the depopulation of the West African countryside or the gentrification of urban centers in Europe and North America.

Martinez follows her take on European history with the assertion that the U.S. was the "first capitalist system created from scratch entirely from the theft of land of Native Americans and the enslaved labor of Africans." Once again, not supportable by the evidence. Money made via the capital accumulation process in Europe was instrumental in the development of the U.S. well into the 19th century. For example, much of the railroad building which "opened" the West was financed by British and French investors. The factors mentioned by Martinez certainly played an important part. But so did the exploitation of European immigrants, many of whom were initially virtual slaves (indentured servants), one of the reasons they often ran away from the European colonies and joined the indigenous peoples (as did many slaves). The Dismal Swamp community and its fight against the mainstream colonial society is one notable case.

This exploitation has continued. Martinez talks about the opening of America to "millions of Europeans who came seeking life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." I wish she was trying to be ironic, but I failed to detect such an attitude. In reality, most of those immigrants were people displaced by the ongoing land thefts. Perhaps they came to the States with high hopes, but usually the reality was factory wage slavery, which can be even worse than open slavery in some ways. A slave is the property of a master, who thus must keep the slave alive or lose the "investment." But a wage worker is supposedly "free," i.e. on his/her own, free to sell her/his body and creative abilities to the highest bidder in return for enough money to purchase survival needs. Some immigrants wound up as independent farmers in the Midwest and West, only to lose their land to creditors via foreclosure after being squeezed by suppliers and the railroads which transported their produce. They too were channeled to the factories.

Today, most European-Americans are not members of the ruling elite. The average white may have it statistically better than the average African-American or Latino. But that's precisely part of the divide-and-rule strategy.

Martinez also makes it seem as if the U.S. alone is responsible for spreading capitalism around the world. Little is mentioned about the role of Japanese capitalism in spreading the world market to Asia, or the continued role of the original capitalist European home base in all continents. She also conveniently leaves out the major role played by African chiefs and Arab merchants in the slave trade, and the complicity of some Native American tribes in aiding the subjugation of their kinfolds.

In fact, she only vaguely alludes to the need to terminate the global rule of capital, and instead focuses on the "need to rectify the injustice of white supremacy." Seems to me she's more interested in guilt-tripping than in building bridges and bringing out the truth, which does include frequent complicity by European-Americans in systemic racism. We should've learned from the past that guilt is a bad way to bring people over to awareness and action. It's much more effective to shed light on our common situation and everyone's stake in a new society.

--Jack Straw

SLINGSHOT Calendar

MONDAY, OCT 25

- 8:00 pm Berkeley Lessons from the Anti-Defamation Spy Scandal $5-$10 donation North Berkeley Senior Center, 1901 Hearst, Info: (510) 704-0517

TUESDAY, OCT 26

- 8:00 pm Berkeley Video: Paris is Burning A video about the transgender ball in NY Long Haul, 3124 Shattuck, Berkeley

WEDNESDAY, OCT 27

- Noon SF FOOD NOT BOMBS RALLY-LUNCH Free food is not a crime. Come to lunch. Wear a costume. Civic Center in front of City Hall. [SF-FNB (415) 330-5030]
- 7:30 pm Berkeley When Abortion Was Illegal: Untold Stories. A video screening of this Oscar-nominated documentary, plus a reading by author Sumi Hoshiko from her book 'Our Choices: Women's Personal Decisions about Abortion', with discussion. La Peña, 3105 Shattuck, (510) 849-2568.
- 8:00 pm Berkeley Video-They Live Long Haul, 3124 Shattuck [Social Club (510) 547-Onkh]

THURSDAY, OCT 28

- 7:00 pm SF Town Meeting Updates on Prop. V, MATRIX, FNB arrests, scapegoating of immigrants, etc. New College, 777 Valencia

FRIDAY, OCT 29

- Noon Sacramento Day of the Dead Political Funeral for Pete Wilson. See needle Exchange article on p. 1. State Capitol Building. [ACT-UP (415) 252-9200 for info/ transportation]
- 5:00 pm SF Levitate the SF Stock Exchange. Help exorcise the Financial District of the demons that have plagued us all! SF Stock Exchange, Bush and Pine Streets.
- 5:30 pm SF Critical Mass Bike Ride Hundreds of bicyclists take the streets doing their part to levitate the Stock Exchange. Justin Hermann Plaza, foot of Market St. at Embarcadero

- 5:30 pm SF Sparks Fly IV The fourth annual international day of solidarity with women political prisoners, with Dorothy Allison (novelist, poet) Chrystos (poet, author, indigenous land and treaty rights activists), and Melanie De More (African American singer/songwriter). The Women's Building, 3543 18th St. near Valencia [Women Against Imperialism (415) 995-4735] $7-$25

SATURDAY, OCT 30

- Noon SF, National Day of Solidarity with Immigrant Labor Noon rally to protest the abuses to garment workers by Jessica McClintock, Inc. and their Oakland-based subcontractor, Lucky Sewing Co. [Asian Immigrant Women Advocates (510) 268-0192]
- 7:30 Berkeley A Tribute to the People of Haiti Aristide returns on this day. Multi-Cultural tribute with music, dance and poetry. MLK Jr. High School, 1781 Rose St. $7-$25. For Tickets and Info (415) 864-4561

SUNDAY, OCT 31

- 4:45 pm SF Day of the Dead Magical Puppet Performance. Honoring people with HIV and those who have died of HIV. Dolores Park, Dolores at 18th St. [Wise Fool Puppet Intervention (415) 905-5958]
- 7:00 pm SF Day of the Dead Candlelight Procession. See above. Leave from Mission Cultural Center, 2868 Mission St. near 24th. [Galeria de la Raza (415) 828-8009]

THURSDAY, NOV 4

- 7:00 pm Berkeley Queer Film Festival 145 Dwinelle Hall UCB [Radical Film Collective]

SATURDAY, NOV 6

- 9:30 am East Bay Day of Outreach and Community Mobilization to Stop Depo-Provera Join community organizations at locations throughout the East Bay to alert women to the potential health hazards of Depo-Provera, the birth control injection drug. Call in advance (415) 995-4735.

- 7:30 pm Berkeley Haunani-kay Trask Native Hawaiian Activist and Scholar, a talk on the most current issues of the Hawaiian struggle for self-determination and a screening of An Act of War. $7 La Peña, 3015 Shattuck, [Hawaiian Nation Information Group (510) 893-5743]

TUESDAY, NOV 9

- 5:00 pm SF March to the INS Office! International day of anti-fascist actions. Protest anti-immigrant racism on the anniversary of Kristallnacht. ¡ A Desalambrar! Tear Down the Borders. (415) 431-8615, (510) 845-5003

THURSDAY, NOV 11

- 9:00 pm Berkeley Benefit Show for the Long Haul, Ashkenaz, 1317 San Pablo

FRIDAY, NOV 12

- 5:30 pm Berkeley Critical Mass Bike Ride Out of your cars and onto your bikes. Berkeley Bart

THURSDAY, NOV 18

- 9:00 pm Berkeley Benefit Show for Food Not Bombs, Ashkenaz, 1317 San Pablo

SUNDAY, NOV 21

- Benefit Party for Pol Brennah 1983 H-Block escapee arrested in Berkeley, now in Santa Rita fighting his extradition back to Northern Ireland. Info: (510) 848-6466

MONDAY, NOV 22- NOV 28

- Berkeley Animal Liberation theme week at the Infoshop, 3124 Shattuck

WEDNESDAY, DEC 1

- Noon Berkeley International Aids Day Demo We Need a cure, not a stamp. Berkeley Main Post Office. [ACT-UP/EAST BAY (510) 836-4401]

FRIDAY, DEC 10

- 5:30 pm Berkeley Critical Mass Bike Ride Two wheels good, four wheels bad. Berkeley Bart

ON THE AIR

Free Radio Berkeley 88.1 FM Sundays from 9 pm to midnight.
San Francisco Liberation Radio 93.7 FM Wed. & Sat. from 8 pm to 10 pm.

Slingshot Benefit

Cafe Night at Long Haul

Sunday, November 14, 1993 • 6 pm

Chocolate desert

Cheap vegan and vegetarian Food

Help us pay for this issue

At the LONG HAUL • 3124 Shattuck • Berkeley
(2 Blocks from Ashby BART • Across from La Peña • Corner of Woolsey)

Music Benefits

Cool Bands to be announced

For Long Haul
Activist Space

Thursday • November 11
Thursday, November 18

For East Bay
Food Not Bombs

Cool Bands to be announced

Both at 9 pm At Ashkenaz
1317 San Pablo • Berkeley • 525-5054